Compulsory Draft Act Advanced by Senate Committee

Action Taken after Sheppard Says Hitler Plans To Attack U. S.

BITTER DEBATE ON FLOOR IS CERTAIN

National Guard Bill Seems Sure To Pass First

By RICHARD L. TURNER

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—Legislation for compulsory military training of the nation's youth finally received the approval today of the Senate military committee, whose chairman, Senator Sheppard of Texas, asserted on the Senate floor that he firmly believed Adolf Hitler intends to attack this country.

Ready, after many delays and postponements, for consideration in the Senate proper, the measure awaited only the passage of a bill authorizing President Roosevelt to call out the national guard and army reserve officers for intensive training.

So deep is the feeling on the peace-time draft issue that although the Senate debated the national guard bill throughout the day, the conscription question entered repeatedly into the discussion. A battle of unusual proportions obviously awaited it.

Wheeler for Guard Bill

The conscription bill and the national guard measure were several times declared to be companion pieces, but opposition to the latter was apparently negligible. Senator Wheeler (D-Mont), a leader of the anti-conscription bloc, said for one that he saw no objection to the guard bill. It was requested by President Roosevelt and the war department, on the ground that developments in the war abroad had shown that the guard needs special training.

Sheppard's statement that Hitler plans eventually to attack the United States was made in the course of a brisk exchange with Wheeler.

After the latter had disputed Sheppard's contention that a national emergency exists at the present time, and argued that there was no need for compulsory military service, the Texan asserted that if Wheeler could not realize the existence of an emergency, no amount of talking could convince him of it.

"Does the senator think think Hitler will attack the United States?" Wheeler asked with a note of scorn in his voice.

"He will try to attack the United States," Sheppard answered. "That is my firm belief and if it wasn't I wouldn't be here trying to get the Senate to approve this legislation."

Wheeler Raps Propagandists

Wheeler went on to assert that most of "emergency" had been created by "propagandists," who wanted to frighten the people and the Senate "into giving dictatorial powers to some one."

"I can see an emergency and the only emergency I can see is that the election is coming on," Wheeler shouted.

The conscription bill went through the Military committee on a vote of 12 to 3. The opposition votes were cast by Senators Johnson (D-Colo), Thomas (R-Idaho) and Lundeen (FL-Minn). Those voting for the measure were: Sheppard, Reynolds (D-NC), Thomas (D-Utah), Minton (D-Ind), Lee (D-Okla), Hill (D-Ala), Chandler (D-Ky), Smathers (D-NJ), Austin (R-Vt), Schwartz

Nurse Fights for Life after Being Bitten by Snake

Cultists Say She and All Who Have Faith Will Recover

CINCINNATI, Aug. 5. (AP)—Bitten by a copperhead at the height of a religious meeting, a 48-year-old nurse fought for her life today, two men-members of a cult suffered lesser wounds, while from a church spokesman came word that "we'll use snakes in our services whenever the Lord requires."

Robert Sears, bespectacled railroad worker who as pastor of the "True Church of God" employs the title "Brother," added that Mrs. Ethel Sheeby, the victim, was in a hospital because "she didn't feel the power of the Lord" as the deadly-poisonous reptile was passed to her and other members of the congregation at services last night.

"We only handle them when the Lord gives us power," he asserted, "at any other time we suffer from the poison, too."

Police Seize Snakes

Mrs. Sheeby's right arm was swollen almost twice its normal size, hospital attaches reported; antitoxin, hastily obtained from the Cincinnati zoo, was administered, but doctors pronounced her condition serious. Police invaded the meeting and seized two of the reptiles.

Roy Fowler, about 18, of Cincinnati, who resides at Brother Sears' home, exhibited a swollen ankle resulting, he said, from a snakebite during a revival in nearby Moscow, O., earlier yesterday. At least twenty of the reptiles reportedly were used at that meeting. "It's nothin'," he professed. "I felt the power. It'll get well. I got faith."

Evangelist Bitten

Cleveland Hensley, middle-aged evangelist from Harlan county, Ky., who with Rev. G. W. Hensley, of Pineville, Ky., no relation, has been conducting cult services hereabouts, held forth a badly swollen right hand. He, too, affirmed that "faith'll make it well agin."

The Rev. Mr. Hensley declared proudly that he had "been bitten 300 times or more."

Blitzkrieg Seems Likely To Start At Any Moment

British Move Fleet into Atlantic, Germans Silence Radio

RESOLUTION DAMAGED BY ENEMY BOMBERS

Several British Sailors Reported Killed in Attack

By The Associated Press

A sudden and mysterious movement of nineteen British warships from Gibraltar toward the Atlantic ocean and the silencing of the entire German radio system for approximately six hours fanned the possibility of blitzkrieg to new storm proportions early today (Tuesday).

Whether the long-threatened but long-withheld German attempt to invade Britain was at hand was a matter of speculation, but the juxtaposition of events made it an ominous possibility.

The shutdown of the German wireless for "technical alterations" was carried in a terse English-language announcement heard by the National Broadcasting Company at 10:22 (EST) Monday, to be effective until 5:15 a. m. (EST) Tuesday.

Silent at Other Times

The announced reason might be entirely accurate, but wartime observers recalled that every previous Blitzkrieg had been preceded and accompanied by clamps on communication facilities.

The British warship movements were reported from La Linea, Spain, the town that sits abaft that British fortress rock. These reports said the ships first headed Monday morning, toward the Mediterranean, where they have gone before, but then circled about and headed toward the Atlantic.

From Gibraltar to Southampton, England, is 1,143 miles, roughly three days' steaming time by a large squadron, possibly less by faster individual units. The report took more than twelve hours to reach New York via Lisbon.

May Be a Feint

This move, too, might be merely a British feint; might be an exaggeration from La Linea—many of whose residents have been kicked out of Gibraltar for various reasons over a period of many years; or it might mean a sudden sharpening of the comparatively quiet war of the last six weeks.

Britain's shores today and through Friday are being lashed by the highest tides of August, and the Longrange weather forecast calls

Royal Air Force Scores Many Hits

Reported Successful in Every One of 23 Bombing Attacks

LONDON, Aug. 5 (AP)—The Royal Air Force was reported tonight to have registerd direct hits in every one of twenty-three bombing attacks on the German port city of Hamburg since May 10—part of Britain's forty-eight raids into Germany in the past fifty-six nights.

The detailed report on the objective at Hamburg was made by Information Minister Alfred Duff Cooper in reply to German denials of British reports that port facilities, oil refineries and munitions factories at Hamburg were "practically in ruins."

Duff Cooper said the oil depots were attacked fourteen times, the docks six times, the railways three times and the Hamburg airdrome twice. "In some cases," he said, "fires were started which were seen as much as eighty miles away on the bombers' return journey."

(American correspondents gave account of a German conducted trip to Hamburg and a visit to a churchtop from which, they said, there was no sign of damage to the port and harbor facilities that they could see.)

The British minister of information commented that in a city as large as Hamburg damage to scattered munitions factories might not be seen from a single observation point, and only a small part of the twenty miles of docks could be observed.

Willkie Says He Is Man To Cure Industrial Ills

Republican Candidate Cheered as He Discusses Major Problems

By WILLIAM B. ARDERY

DES MOINES, IOWA, Aug. 5 (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie said today that industry should be decentralized as a defense and economic measure and added that he was the man to do the job.

The Republican nominee, speaking under a brilliant sun at the Iowa state house after a farm conference here, was cheered loudly when he told the crowd that one of the country's chief troubles was that industry had been concentrated in a few major cities.

"One of our real problems is the decentralization of industry," Willkie continued, "so that prosperity and plants may be brought back to the medium sized city."

Willkie then remarked that there was a definite connection between a national defense program and industrial processes. He said he would like to see arms plants located in many medium-sized towns "like those scattered all over Iowa."

Understands Problems

"The type of man who can bring that about," he continued, "is the type of man who understands the practical problems of industry—the type of man who understands your problems.

"If I am elected president, you will have someone who understands you problems."

The nominee took occasion during his brief talk to describe Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace, the Democratic vice presidential nominee, as "an eminent public servant" and a "gentleman and a scholar."

He told a group of newspaper editors that Germany had "crushed France like an egg shell" because the French "adopted the candy stick system of government."

Preston Grover Tells What He Saw from German Airplane

(Editor's note: Preston Grover, member of the Associated Press staff in Berlin and former Washington columnist, was taken on an airplane tour over the English channel and Germany's low country front, opposite Britain, and tells what he saw at the hidden bomber bases from which Nazi planes strike at England)

By PRESTON GROVER

GHENT, Belgium, Aug. 5 (AP)—At one of the hidden bomber bases from which Germany strikes across the English channel I have seen the dread Stukas, called the Nazis' most powerful air weapon, rehearse their scream-down attacks.

With a party of other foreign newspaper correspondents I saw the hidden airdrome with its camouflaged guns and planes at the end of a flight over the English channel in a Messerchmitt-escorted transport plane.

Dunkerque Deserted

We met no English planes. I saw no ships afloat—only the partly sunken wreckage of boats at Dunkerque from which the British embarked in the last hours of the battle of Flanders early in June. Dunkerque, itself, was a spectacle from a nightmare. Amid its ruin of buildings not a single person could be seen.

The Germans told us their bomber attacks had cleared the channel of English shipping because ship losses were too costly, even in guarded convoys.

We started near Ghent, flew to the coast, went over Dunkerque, but turned inland before we reached Calais, nearest German-held coastal point to England and possible take-off center for long-awaited invasion.

We landed, inland from Boulogne, in northern France on a cloverfield used as an attack air base.

Sees Many Fighter Planes

Not until we were on the ground could we see the rows of anti-aircraft guns guarding the field or the fighter planes backed under trees.

At a rocket signal six of the planes roared out from shelter. The last was in the air within fifty seconds. We were told pilots in re-

DES MOINES — Wendell Willkie was reported to have told a conference of midwest Republican governors and party leaders that he did not want to discuss political advantage in connection with the farm problem.

WASHINGTON — Senator Hatch (D-NM) said an interpretation by Henry P. Fletcher, general counsel of the Republican National Committee, of the Hatch act's limitations on campaign expenditures was an exposition "to evade the principle of the act." Fletcher said the Republicans were "leaning backwards" to observe the law, and challenged Attorney General Jackson to say publicly why he disagreed with Fletcher's interpretation.

Missouri and Kansas hold primaries today (Tuesday) with principal national interest centered on the three-way fight by Governor Lloyd C. Stark, Senator Harry S. Fletcher Charges Jackson Tries To Intimidate GOP Contributors

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—Henry F. Fletched, Republican general counsel, tonight demanded to know whether Attorney General Jackson was attempting to intimidate contributions to Wendell Willkies' campaign.

Fuetcher had issued an interpretation of the Hatch act's restrictions on campaign contributions, and Jackson had characterized the interpretation as plan "for avoiding the limitations" of the act.

In reply, Flecher said in a statement that the Republican national committee had no intention of "evading or striking these provisions. He challenged Jackson to say specifically wherein the interpretation was wrong and asked.

"Is Mr. Jackson, by a general denial of my interpretation, trying to intimidate contributions to any committee working for Mr. Willkie? If not, will he tell me where I am wrong? We want to observe the law."

Fletcher made public Saturday his opinion that the act's provisions

FDR Asks Law Be Observed in All 5th Column Cases

President Calls for Close Federal and State Cooperation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—President Roosevelt asked today for close federal and state co-operation in meeting the threat of "fifth columnists," but urged that it be carried out solely through normal law enforcement channels.

In a message to a conference on law enforcement problems of national defense, Mr. Roosevelt mentioned "the cruel stupidities of the vigilante," and observed: "The amateur detective soon becomes a fussy and malicious busybody."

On the point of federal-state co-operation, he said "there are many policies where joint control can be effectively worked."

"I have in mind, as an example," he said, "the enactment by Congress and the state legislatures of laws dealing with subversive activities, with seditious acts, with those things which slow up or break down our common defense program.

Asks Care in Legislation

"The mutual objectives can be reached by carefully considered legislation, free from the prejudice and emotional haste which characterized much of similar legislation during the last World war."

Mr. Roosevelt's message to the meeting of 165 officials from forty-five states was read by Attorney General Jackson.

Addressing the meeting, Jackson warned of "an effort being made here now to try to 'soften' this country as France was 'softened.'"

He asserted that the "softening" efforts took the form of "the promise of business orders and of profits if the war can be called off and business relations resumed as usual with the victor" in an effort to create a "fifth column among men of influence and respectability."

Jackson listed this general form of fifth column activity:

Proselyting or attempting to convert Americans from their traditional beliefs; "softening" by creating confusion or discrediting a nation's leaders; using threats of reprisals and promises of reward.

Hoover Raps Interlopers

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said that "the time is rapidly approaching when as a nation we must choose between the welfare of the great masses of Americans and a few interlopers who hide between the bill of rights while they undermine our nation."

The governors' conference, the council of state governments, the national association of attorneys general, and the interstate commission on crime sponsored the conference in co-operation with the justice department. Only Arizona, Idaho, and Utah were not represented at the first session.

Recommendation will be submitted to the conference tomorrow by committees.

Michael F. Tighe Dies at Age 82

Union Leader Life-long Supporter of the A.F. of L.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 5. (AP)—Michael F. Tighe, who for seventeen years headed the nation's first steel union on which the CIO built its steel workers organizing committee, died today. He suffered a stroke March 1, nine days before his eighty-second birthday.

"Fighting Mike" as he liked to be called, rose to the presidency of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers from a $2-a-week job in a Wheeling, W. Va., nail factory which he took at the age of ten.

Until his death Tighe favored the A. F. of L. of which the Amalgamated was a charter member, to the CIO. But he wanted labor peace and he stubbornly refused to talk for publication about his views either before or after his union joined the industrial movement of John L. Lewis in 1936. He retired that year without standing for re-election.

"Old Mike" became president of the union just before the disastrous 1919 steel strike, which came in the wake of a big organization drive conducted by more than a dozen craft unions under the general leadership of William Z. Foster.

Tighe was born in Boonton, N. J., but moved at an early age to Wheeling with his father and three brothers. He worked twenty-nine years for the Wheeling Iron and Nail Company before taking a full-time union job.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tighe, the widow, is the only immediate survivor.

Pershing's Proposal To Send Warships To Aid of Britain Arouses Ire of Senator Wheeler

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5. (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was bitterly denounced in the Senate today by Senator Pepper (D-Fla) as "the chief of the fifth column in this country."

Pepper's remarks were occasioned by the flier's speech Sunday urging "co-operation" with Germany if Germany wins the war.

Meantime, General John J. Pershing's proposal that American destroyers be made available to Great Britain was denounced as a "direct step toward war," by Senator Wheeler (D-Mont). Chairman Pittman (D-Ney) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, commenting on Pershing's proposal, suggested the possibility of swapping destroyers for a few British battleships, which he said appeared to be of little practical use in North Sea battles.

Bitter Toward Lindbergh

Pepper, rising in the Senate toward the close of a day devoted to a discussion of conscription and related issues, said that "Perhaps within a few hours, perhaps in a few days, perhaps within a few months, the American people will have to decide whether they are going to follow the chief of the fifth column in this country—Col. Lindbergh—or are going to follow General Pershing."

Pershing never received a medal from the "head of the German air corps." Pepper said, recalling that a "cross of recognition and merit" had been bestowed upon Lindbergh by Field Marshal Goering. He added he had no doubt that the efficiency of the German military machine had taken a "great hold on the affection and admiration" of the aviator and that where he is concerned "no doubt the German Fuehrer holds up a worthy objective—maybe he believes in regimentation."

A ripple of laughter spread through galleries as Pepper recalling that Lindbergh had collaborated in the development of a mechanical heart," said "this man knows more about a mechanical heart than he does a human heart."

Minton also Against Flier

Senator Minton (D-Ind) interrupted at one point to say that Lindbergh had not offered his services as a flier "in this emergency when we are trying hard to build up our defenses." To this Pepper responded that perhaps Lindbergh would not "like to wear the uniform of a country that is following the present policies of this country."

"I don't think he would be so terribly frightened," Pepper continued, "if news came that the Germans had landed in this country, because Col. Lindbergh would know that at least Col. Lindbergh wouldn't be harmed under the Fuehrer of Germany."

Senator Lee, (D-Okla) added the suggestion that if Col. Lindbergh had not earned the German medal when it was presented to him he has by now earned it."

At the close of the discussion, Senator Holt (D-W Va) said that "if we turn back the pages of history to 1917 we find that almost the same utterances were made against Col. Lindbergh's distinguished father, Congressman Lindbergh, who voted against entering the war."

"I fear the same result (entry in

U. S. and Russia Avert Threatened Break in Their Trade Relations

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—The United States and Soviet Russia, averting a threatened break in trade relations, were said to be near agreement tonight on a basis for commercial dealings for another year.

The existing agreement under which Soviet Russia promised to buy at least $40,000,000 worth of American goods during the year and actually purchased far more than this, expires tomorrow.

Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, said today he understood a new agreement was in prospect, though not yet actually concluded. In Moscow, where the negotiations centered, it was reported they had reached an advanced stage and that the existing agreement would remain in force pending conclusion of the new one.

Terms May Be Modified

Whether the terms of the present agreement would be modified to any large extent was not disclosed in either capital, but it was considered likely that the basic provisions would be retained.

There was no indication whether

Dunkerque Deserted

We met no English planes. I saw no ships afloat—only the partly sunken wreckage of boats at Dunkerque from which the British embarked in the last hours of the battle of Flanders early in June. Dunkerque, itself, was a spectacle from a nightmare. Amid its ruin of buildings not a single person could be seen.

The Germans told us their bomber attacks had cleared the channel of English shipping because ship losses were too costly, even in guarded convoys.

We started near Ghent, flew to the coast, went over Dunkerque, but turned inland before we reached Calais, nearest German-held coastal point to England and possible take-off center for long-awaited invasion.

We landed, inland from Boulogne, in northern France on a cloverfield used as an attack air base.

Sees Many Fighter Planes

Not until we were on the ground could we see the rows of anti-aircraft guns guarding the field or the fighter planes backed under trees.

At a rocket signal six of the planes roared out from shelter. The last was in the air within fifty seconds. We were told pilots in re-

Political News At a Glance

DES MOINES — Wendell Willkie was reported to have told a conference of midwest Republican governors and party leaders that he did not want to discuss political advantage in connection with the farm problem.

WASHINGTON — Senator Hatch (D-NM) said an interpretation by Henry P. Fletcher, general counsel of the Republican National Committee, of the Hatch act's limitations on campaign expenditures was an exposition "to evade the principle of the act." Fletcher said the Republicans were "leaning backwards" to observe the law, and challenged Attorney General Jackson to say publicly why he disagreed with Fletcher's interpretation.

Missouri and Kansas hold primaries today (Tuesday) with principal national interest centered on the three-way fight by Governor Lloyd C. Stark, Senator Harry S. Truman and Maurice Milligan for the Democratic Senatorial nomination. A Virginia Democratic primary was called off because Senator Harry F. Byrd and House members had no opposition.

Michael F. Tighe Dies at Age 82

Union Leader Life-long Supporter of the A.F. of L.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 5. (AP)—Michael F. Tighe, who for seventeen years headed the nation's first steel union on which the CIO built its steel workers organizing committee, died today. He suffered a stroke March 1, nine days before his eighty-second birthday.

"Fighting Mike" as he liked to be called, rose to the presidency of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers from a $2-a-week job in a Wheeling, W. Va., nail factory which he took at the age of ten.

Until his death Tighe favored the A. F. of L., of which the Amalgamated was a charter member, to the CIO. But he wanted labor peace and he stubbornly refused to talk for publication about his views either before or after his union joined the industrial movement of John L. Lewis in 1936. He retired that year without standing for re-election.

"Old Mike" became president of the union just before the disastrous 1919 steel strike, which came in the wake of a big organization drive conducted by more than a dozen craft unions under the general leadership of William Z. Foster.

Tighe was born in Boonton, N. J., but moved at an early age to Wheeling with his father and three brothers. He worked twenty-nine years for the Wheeling Iron and Nail Company before taking a full-time union job.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tighe, the widow, is the only immediate survivor.

FDR Asks Law Be Observed in All 5th Column Cases

President Calls for Close Federal and State Cooperation

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—President Roosevelt asked today for close federal and state co-operation in meeting the threat of "fifth columnists," but urged that it be carried out solely through normal law enforcement channels.

In a message to a conference on law enforcement problems of national defense, Mr. Roosevelt mentioned "the cruel stupidities of the vigilante," and observed: "The amateur detective soon becomes a fussy and malicious busybody."

On the point of federal-state co-operation, he said "there are many policies where joint control can be effectively worked."

"I have in mind, as an example," he said, "the enactment by Congress and the state legislatures of laws dealing with subversive activities, with seditious acts, with those things which slow up or break down our common defense program.

Asks Care in Legislation

"The mutual objectives can be reached by carefully considered legislation, free from the prejudice and emotional haste which characterized much of similar legislation during the last World war."

Mr. Roosevelt's message to the meeting of 165 officials from forty-five states was read by Attorney General Jackson.

Addressing the meeting, Jackson warned of "an effort being made here now to try to 'soften' this country as France was 'softened.'"

He asserted that the "softening" efforts took the form of "the promise of business orders and of profits if the war can be called off and business relations resumed as usual with the victor" in an effort to create a "fifth column among men of influence and respectability."

Jackson listed this general form of fifth column activity:

Proselyting or attempting to convert Americans from their traditional beliefs; "softening" by creating confusion or discrediting a nation's leaders; using threats of reprisals and promises of reward.

Hoover Raps Interlopers

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said that "the time is rapidly approaching when as a nation we must choose between the welfare of the great masses of Americans and a few interlopers who hide between the bill of rights while they undermine our nation."

The governors' conference, the council of state governments, the national association of attorneys general, and the interstate commission on crime sponsored the conference in co-operation with the justice department. Only Arizona, Idaho, and Utah were not represented at the first session.

Recommendation will be submitted to the conference tomorrow by committees.

Pershing's Proposal To Send Warships To Aid of Britain Arouses Ire of Senator Wheeler

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5. (AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was bitterly denounced in the Senate today by Senator Pepper (D-Fla) as "the chief of the fifth column in this country."

Pepper's remarks were occasioned by the flier's speech Sunday urging "co-operation" with Germany if Germany wins the war.

Meantime, General John J. Pershing's proposal that American destroyers be made available to Great Britain was denounced as a "direct step toward war," by Senator Wheeler (D-Mont), Chairman Pittman (D-Nev) of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, commenting on Pershing's proposal, suggested the possibility of swapping destroyers for a few British battleships, which he said appeared to be of little practical use in North Sea battles.

Bitter Toward Lindbergh

Pepper, rising in the Senate toward the close of a day devoted to a discussion of conscription and related issues, said that "Perhaps within a few hours, perhaps in a few days, perhaps within a few months, the American people will have to decide whether they are going to follow the chief of the fifth column in this country—Col. Lindbergh—or are going to follow General Pershing."

Pershing never received a medal from the "head of the German air corps," Pepper said, recalling that a "cross of recognition and merit" had been bestowed upon Lindbergh by Field Marshal Goering. He added he had no doubt that the efficiency of the German military machine had taken a "great hold on the affection and admiration" of the aviator and that where he is concerned "no doubt the German Fuehrer holds up a worthy objective—maybe he believes in regimentation."

A ripple of laughter spread through galleries as Pepper, recalling that Lindbergh had collaborated in the development of a mechanical heart," said "this man knows more about a mechanical heart than he does a human heart."

Minton also Against Flier

Senator Minton (D-Ind) interrupted at one point to say that Lindbergh had not offered his services as a flier "in this emergency when we are trying hard to build up our defenses." To this Pepper responded that perhaps Lindbergh would not "like to wear the uniform of a country that is following the present policies of this country."

"I don't think he would be so terribly frightened," Pepper continued, "if news came that the Germans had landed in this country, because Col. Lindbergh would know that at least Col. Lindbergh wouldn't be harmed under the Fuehrer of Germany."

Senator Lee, (D-Okla) added the suggestion that if Col. Lindbergh had not earned the German medal when it was presented to him he has by now earned it."

At the close of the discussion, Senator Holt (D-W Va) said that "if we turn back the pages of history to 1917 we find that almost the same utterances were made against Col. Lindbergh's distinguished father, Congressman Lindbergh, who voted against entering the war."

"I fear the same result (entry in

Famous Writer and Lecturer Says Gangsters Seek National Power

Fletcher Charges Jackson Tries To Intimidate GOP Contributors

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—Henry F. Fletched, Republican general counsel, tonight demanded to know whether Attornew General Jackson was attempting to intimidate contributions to Wendell Willkies' campaign.

Fuetcher had issued an interpretation of the Hatch act's restrictions on campaign contributions, and Jackson had characterized the interpretation as plan "for avoiding the limitations" of the act.

In reply, Flecher said in a statement that the Republican national committee had no intention of "evading or striking" these provisions. He challenged Jackson to say specifically wherein the interpretation was wrong and asked.

"Is Mr. Jackson, by a general denial of my interpretation, trying to intimidate contributions to any committee working for Mr. Willkie? If not, will he tell me where I am wrong? We want to observe the law."

Fletcher made public Saturday his opinion that the act's provisions

U. S. and Russia Avert Threatened Break in Their Trade Relations

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—The United States and Soviet Russia, averting a threatened break in trade relations, were said to be near agreement tonight on a basis for commercial dealings for another year.

The existing agreement under which Soviet Russia promised to buy at least $40,000,000 worth of American goods during the year and actually purchased far more than this, expires tomorrow.

Sumner Welles, acting secretary of state, said today he understood a new agreement was in prospect, though not yet actually concluded. In Moscow, where the negotiations centered, it was reported they had reached an advanced stage and that the existing agreement would remain in force pending conclusion of the new one.

Terms May Be Modified

Whether the terms of the present agreement would be modified to any large extent was not disclosed in either capital, but it was considered likely that the basic provisions would be retained.

British Aircraft Production Equals That of Germany

Great Gains Made since Start of the War, Officials Assert

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 5 —Britain's aircraft production now equals Germany's, it was declared authoritatively today.

Supporting evidence was offered in increasingly violent aerial smashes at potential continental hopping-off places for the Nazi invasion attempt believed close at hand.

Britons, alertly watching channel tides favorably for Adolf Hitler's threatened assault, heard that their airplane factories are running "neck and neck" with the German output and that, with United States and Canadian production, their monthly accumulation of planes actually exceeds that of the Nazis.

Coupled with this were accounts of British planes carrying the war to the Germans with heavier and heavier attacks designed to smash any invasion before it can get started.

Set Oil Plant Afire

Tonight's air ministry communique said British bombers, carrying out their nightly forays, set ablaze an oil plant at Sterkrade in the Ruhr and a hangar at Krefeld last night without the loss of a single plane.

Fourteen tons of high explosive and incendiary bombs were rained on the sythetic oil works at Sterkrade, the air ministry announced, by British bombers attacking in waves from before midnight until the early hours of today.

The returning pilots said they first shattered the tanks then fired the oil flowing from them with their incendiaries. They told of earth-jarring explosions followed by flames which lighted up the countryside for miles around.

British planes reported three Messerschmitt fighters shot down, two within range of German anti-aircraft guns on the French coast. One British plane was lost.

The Germans kept up their harassing attacks on Britain today, dropping high explosive and incendiary bombs in isolated districts of the midlands and east England.

Nazi Plans Off Coast

Big forces of Nazis planes approached the southeast coast several times but made no attempt to cross. Machine gun fire was heard in the late afternoon when RAF fighters made contact with the Germans. The invaders broke off the engagement and sped back to the French coast.

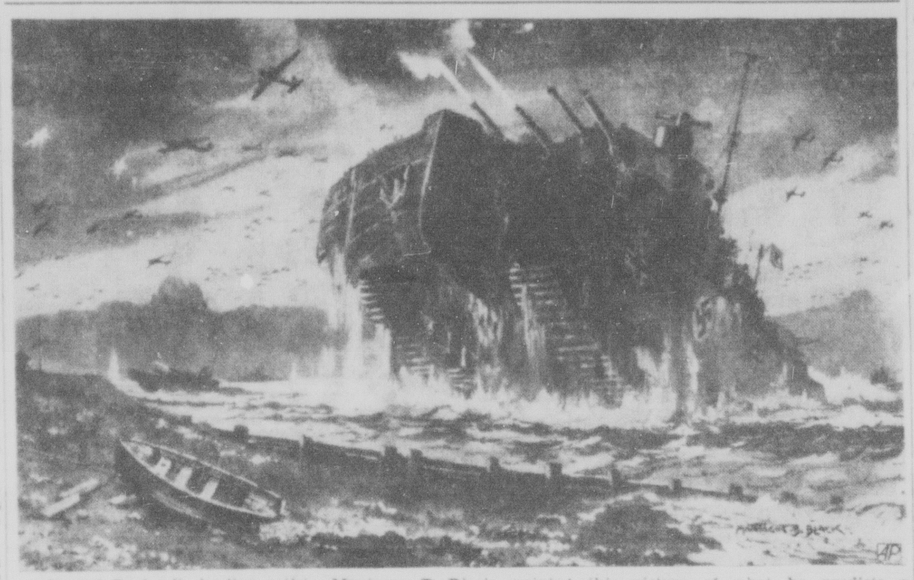

One person was killed in German raids last night, but property damage was "negligible."

Authoritative quarters, telling of Britain's stepped-up airplane production, compared the increasing activity of Britain's bombers and that of the German air force.

During a recent month the British dropped 33,431 bombs in Germany and German-occupied territory while the Nazis were dropping 66,987 bombs on Britain.

Despite equality in production, it was pointed out that it might take a long time to overcorpe Germany's numerical superiority.

BRITISH VIEW OF THINGS TO COME

Greeks Stirred by Reports of Plot

Effort To Overthrow Small Balkan Nation Frustrated

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 5 (AP)—Bulgaria and Rumania, bowing to the will of Adolf Hitler after twenty-seven years of territorial controversy, will reach an agreement by Saturday returning southern Dobruja to Bulgaria, sources close to the Bulgarian government asserted today.

Dobruja went to Rumania in 1913 after Bulgaria's defeat in the second Balkan war.

Greece, another Balkan nation, was stirred by a report of a frustrated plot to overthrow the authoritarian regime of Premier General John Metaxas.

The well informed newspaper Kathimerini said an anti-Metaxas group was banished after it was found plotting to seize control of Greece.

Following Hitler's instructions to Balkan diplomats at Salzburg last week that they settle their differences peaceably—and soon—preliminary negotiations were ended today, these sources said.

Balkan experts said Bulgaria would receive her reward for leaning toward the Rome-Berlin axis, a trend Rumania recently copied. German support for Bulgaria was reflected in the newspaper Slovo. It reported that Premier Bogdan Philoff and Foreign Minister Ivan Popoff last week expressed to Hitler "Bulgaria's loyalty to the Rome-Berlin axis."

Soviet Russia already has taken back from Rumania the big province of Bessarabia, to which she never renounced her claim. Rumania faces a third territorial loss, the province of Transylvania, which Hungary wants back.

lays sit in six or more of the planes day and night, ready for instant action aloft.

"Our main job," the flight commander explained, "is to accompany bombers which come from farther inland for business over England."

I questioned a young flier about the actual fighting. His comment was:

"It's becoming harder and harder to make them (the British) come out and fight. We almost never have dogfights over our side of the channel. We must go over to their side or well over England, to get them out."

Bag 75 British Planes

He said he had brought down three of seventy-three planes credited to his squadron since the war began.

I watched the dive bombers in a demonstration. They have sirens attached to each wheel support operated by tiny propellors.

They climbed to 15,000 feet, then screamed down at us making the most horrifying noise I ever heard. The sound swelled as the planes came down until the whole sky seemed filled with it.

The planes pulled out of the dive and went over us at a hedge-clipping elevation, wavering and dodging to show how they evade anti-aircraft fire.

German officers said the Stukas are of tremendous effect because of their extreme accuracy, the awful force with which they hurl their bombs and the "utter demoralization" they cause among troops.

Thirty Stukas in the group we saw claim to have sunk "several times 10,000 tons" of English shipping, and forced the surrender of 12,000 Netherlands troops within an hour near Dortrecht.

Edward J. Flynn Scores Willkie

Objects To Being Called "Boss" by Republican Candidate

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (AP)—Edward J. Flynn, new national Democratic chairman, today characterized as "this twaddle," Wendell L. Willkie's description of him as "Boss Flynn," and accused the Republican standard bearer of "hypocrisy."

He said Willkie had been a "paying member" of the Grover Cleveland Democratic club in New York, and had run for county committeeman—with Mrs. Willkie—on the same ticket as Postmaster General James A. Farley and Frank Walker, former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

"This twaddle about this, that or the other boss or political machine is silly," Flynn said in a prepared statement. "If Mr. Willkie thinks that he can convince the American people that President Roosevelt is being guided or influenced by any political bosses or political machine he is due for a very sad awakening."

"Mr. Willkie's sudden distaste for 'machine politics,' as he terms it, is pure political expediency.

"The facts prove, however, that Mr. Willkie will use Tammany Hall, the Democratic party, or the Republican party to advance what for the moment will further his own personal interest, or the utility interests, which he so nobly represents.

"The issues facing the American people are far too serious for such trivial treatment. I don't think that the American people want to elevate to the presidency a man who can be guilty of that kind of hypocricy."

Britain Releases Satoru Makihara; Japanese Agent

Difficulties with Tokyo To Come before Commons Today

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 5—Great Britain tonight released one of its two highly-placed Japanese businessmen who were seized in an empire-wide roundup of Japan's nationals and the Churchill government made ready to lay its difficulties with the Japanese before Commons tomorrow.

The first Japanese arrested last Friday was Satoru Makihara, London agent for the vast Mitsubishi interests, and he was the first released amid frowing Japanese protests and demonstrations. Eight other Japanese remained in custody in various parts of the empire.

Insufficient Evidence

It was said reliably the home office decided "evidence available was insufficient to warrant further detention" of Makihara.

Either Prime Minister Churchill or R. A. Butler, undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, will make the statement on British-Japanese relations, it was said.

Before the release of Makihara, hints that Japan would sever diplomatic relations with Great Britain if necessary to obtain satisfactory widened the breach between Japan and Britain.

Japan has made two strong protests over the seizure of two prominent Japanese businessmen in London last Friday and was reported drafting a third and stronger note to include all Japanese taken in custody.

Reprisals Reported

But, to all protests, the British have quietly said the arrests were coincidental with the arrests of British citizens by the Japanese in an espionage inquiry and certainly could not be considered reprisals.

The Japanese embassy said Britain's answer was highly unsatisfactory.

Reports reaching London said the influential Japanese newspaper Nichi Nichi declared that "Japan will, if necessary, break off diplomatic relations with England" if she fails to obtain satisfaction.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

This is bound to be an uneasy week for Britain. Time and tide, which wait on no man, favor a German attempt at invasion as they may not again until next spring.

There will be other high tides in the English channel and North Sea before then, other moonless nights and other prospective fogs to screen a Nazi onset. Yet the time factor will not be the same. The September equinox is only six weeks away.

The Germans seem to be confronted with a choice of attacking now or waiting until next year. If the week passes without a break in the virtual stalemate that has endured since mid-June it will go far toward convincing the world that whatever his own desire, Hitler's generals have ruled out invasion as too risky, until England has been "softened" by blockade.

If that is the case, and there have been strong hints from both Rome and Berlin that it is, it means that the axis military leaders view the invasion problem in about the same dubious way as do many American naval and military men. Such of them as have discussed the matter with this writer in the last six weeks believed that invasion would be the last recourse of German strategy. What most concerned them was whether England could hold out against wholesale air attack (which has not yet developed) or against prolonged blockade.

Pershing's Plea Considered

To cap that view of professional observers there now comes a more precise expression. General Pershing voices an emphatic public plea that fifty or more American destroyers, built during the World war, be turned over to the British to aid them in their hour of peril by "means short of war."

It obviously would take considerable time to make this fleet of sea hornets an active factor in the battle of Britain. Yet the former commander of the American expeditionary force, whose prestige and contacts make him thoroughly familiar with American military and naval opinion, reports that it is "nearly unanimous" in supporting the destroyer transfer.

British Victory Predicted

Behind that Pershing plea clearly lies the conclusion that a Blitzkrieg against England, if attempted during this week of high tides and dark nights, would be beaten off. The help for England he urged could not possibly be made available to participate in the defense of Britain for some weeks, yet he expressed confidence that as a stop-gap until Britain's own destroyer program reaches full production within "a few months," the American destroyers would be of invaluable assistance. They could be used, he said, to "convoy merchant ships, to escort warships and hunt submarines and to repel invasion."

"By sending help to the British we can still hope with confidence to keep the war on the other side of the Atlantic," Pershing said.

Hitler recently told the Reichstag that the German invasion of Norway was the most "daring" military adventure in history. Attempted invasion of England, unless Britons had first been brought close to despair by bombing and starvation, would make the Norwegian campaign a minor operation by contrast. The elements argue for it; but every rule of military prudence against it.

Italy Launches Drive To Destroy England's Bases

Intensive Air Raids Take Place over a Large Area

By The Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 5—Italy launched a systematic aerial offensive to destroy important British bases ringing Italy's African possessions, it was reported today by Stefani, official Italian news agency.

Italian air raids over the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Kenya and Aden, wrecked some of Britain's most valuable centers over the week-end, Stefani said.

Among them were remote airfields hastily built because of Italian bombardment of regular airdromes.

Heavy aerial blows also were reported by the command, which said fourteen British ships were shot down in Africa Sunday—including ten in one big battle.

Attack Over Wide Area

British targets stretched over 1,850 miles, from Mersa Matruh, on the Egyptian coast, to the port of Berbera, British Somaliland, on the Gulf of Aden below the Red Sea.

When British warplanes attempted to bomb Libyan troops near the Egyptian frontier, the high command said, Italian fighters shot down seven.

The British attack, it said, caused only "light damage"—four persons were killed and thirty wounded. No Italian planes were reported lost.

(Two Royal Air Force communiques issued at Cairo gave this version:

(British fighters headed off Italian raiders raiding Mers A Matruh, hitting two so badly "it is unlikely that they returned to their base" and compelling others to jettison their bombs in the sea.

Naval Vessel Hit

(In raids on Massaua, a fuel dump was attacked, a direct hit was scored on a naval vessel and "in a low level attack bombs were seen bursting among submarines," the British said.

(British reconnaissance aircraft, escorted by four fighters, met fifty enemy fighters in Eastern Libya . . . three enemy aircraft were shot down . . . one of our fighters is missing.")

"Our bombing formations have devastated and disorganized the most important military objectives, whose efficiency was most useful and essential to the enemy," Stefani declared.

Summary of War News

By The Associated Press

Great Britain met growing Japanese hints of possible rupture of diplomatic relations today (Tuesday) by releasing one of the nine Japanese nationals arrested in swift moves throughout the British empire.

Beyond saying that its evidence was not sufficient to hold Satoru Makihara, London representatives of the tremendous Mitsubishi interests, the British government saved its statement on the tense situation for today's meeting of Commons. Makihara was freed from Brixton prison.

But the British kept behind bars eight other Japanese, while the Japanese kept in custody seven out of fifteen British citizens arrested in what the Japanese said was a drive against British espionage.

Fighting planes and bombers stole the war spotlight.

Blast Munitions Dump

Raiding warplanes blasted a munitions dump at British-owned Gibraltar; Italy began a systematic aerial campaign to destroy important British bases around Mussolini's African possessions; the British reported destructive raids against Italian and German objectives in Africa and Europe; and the Germans told of raids on British anti-aircraft positions, oil tanks and shipyards.

But still the expected German blitzkrieg on England did not come. With the month's highest tides running on Britain's shores, defense watchers were more alert than ever for a German attack by sea.

The British said their monthly accumulation of planes now exceeds that of the Nazis. They said that British aircraft production is on a par with Germany and that Canadian and United States production put it over the Nazi figure.

Latvia in Red Union

Russia added Latvia to the Red union and waited for today to accept Estonia's bid for admission into the U. S. S. R. Lithuania already has been taken in and Estonia's entrance will mark the clean sweep by Russia of the three Baltic states.

Bulgaria and Rumania will reach an agreement by Saturday under which southern Dobruja will be returned to Bulgaria, sources close to the Bulgarian government said. This settlement was ordered by Adolf Hitler—and Rumania still has to negotiate on Hitler's orders with Hungary for Transylvania.

A British dispatch said a Danish ship with "several" persons aboard struck a mine and sank Sunday night while leaving Copenhagen harbor. The passengers were believed safe. Copenhagen port traffic was suspended yesterday.

France, striving to rise from defeat, will pay her citizens in proportion to the size of their families instead of the usual merit-based salaries, youth minister Jean Ybarnegaray announced. He said French woman would return to their "prime traditional purpose of life—being in their homes, having children and living only to raise strong useful men."

had greater resources than the Germans."

But, he added, France was crushed because she had adopted the "candy stick" theory of government.

He added that "when a child cries you give him a piece of candy and try to quiet him."

Willkie did not elaborate except to say that this country's defense problems, like that of France, was primarily one of production.

There was applause and scattered boos at Willkie's remark about Wallace. The candidate shook his head and frowned slightly.

In his talk with farm leaders, Willkie said at a press conference, he listened to widely diverse views on farm problems and gained much information which would aid him in writing the farm section of his acceptance address and a later formal farm speech somewhere in the middle west.

He said he had advised a group of about seventy midwestern farm leaders that "as a candidate for president and as the next president" he wanted to obtain the viewpoint of men who actually were farmers.

The conferees, who came from ten states and included a group of governors and candidates for governor, was held in the square, ornate office of Governor George A. Wilson.

Politics Not Discussed

Willkie, seated in the governor's own chair at the head of his desk, was reported to have suggested at one point that a solution of the farm problem had nothing to do with "political feasibility or expediency." He told his press conference that politics had not been discussed at the conference and that he believed such meetings should be free from partisanship.

The nominee said he had expressed no views of his own at the farm meeting.

Appearing at a luncheon of Republican county chairmen, the nominee was loudly applauded when he said that he would seek the viewpoints of many others "in the solution of all the problems I shall approach in the next four years, the next eight years, but not the next twelve years."

Willkie reiterated that his drive for the presidency "is not a campaign but a crusade which must be approached with all the moral fervor of a crusade."

Sen. Lucas "Amazed"

In a radio address replying to Lindbergh, Senator Lucas (D-Ill) said tonight that he was "not only amazed but somewhat shocked by Colonel Lindbergh's attitude of complacency toward Adolf Hitler."

"If, he said, "the American people are looking for guidance and counsel in this hour of uncertainty, I say with all deference to Colonel Lindbergh, that you should stop, look and listen before you follow this youthful man who blossomed overnight into an oracle who instructs the world and his country on such momentous problems as war, statesmanship and diplomacy. xxx

"My friends, I still contend that Colonel Lindbergh is a great American flier."

On the question of Pershing's proposal, Pittman said: "No one can doubt the soundness of his statement that 'if the destroyers help save the British fleet they may save us from the danger and hardships of another war.'"

The Nevada legislator went on to say that the "British fleet is the British empire," and that without it Great Britain "will cease to exist, except possibly in political slavery," and the British dominions and possessions will be at the mercy of Hitler and Japan.

British May Lose—Fleet

"The British ambassador, in his address at Yale University recently stated," he said, "that it is possible Great Britain may have to surrender its fleet to Hitler. That spirit does not encourage the United States to make fifty destroyers available to Great Britain. If such a surrender is possible we had better have our ships on this side of the ocean and under our own control."

Wheeler, on the contrary, was outspokenly critical of the Pershing suggestion.

"If we want to get into the war," he said, "of course we ought to begin by selling destroyers and battleships. Every step we are taking and every step that General Pershing, Secretary Knox and Secretary Stimson are advocating is a direct step toward war. Unless the American people wake up, we'll be in the war before the election—instead of after."

Highway Defenses To Be Discussed

BALTIMORE, Aug. 5 (AP)—Highways — lifelines for modern mechanized armies — will be discussed from a defense standpoint tomorrow at a conference of the State Roads Commission and a representative of the Federal Bureau of Roads.

Ezra B. Whitman, chairman of the Maryland Commission, said all plans were in a tentative stage, but indicated that the conference would deal with the problem of bringing Maryland roads up to the standard required for national defense.

In this connection, the federal government favors a weight-carrying capacity of 36,000 pounds for highways, along with the construction of ten-foot shoulders on certain roads. Some Maryland roads were closed to heavy traffic last spring after they had been weakened by thaws.

The conference is in anticipation of the allotment of federal funds for state road work.

Dispensers Advocate Old-Time Saloon

BALTIMORE, Aug. 5 (AP)—Strong sentiment for a return to the single-license system and the old-time saloon was expressed by Baltimore liquor dispensers today at a hearing by the city board of liquor license commissioners.

Some dispensers pay $500 for a six-day a week license, a seven-day restaurant license costs $750 a year, and beer-only licenses now cost $60 a year.

Charles T. Leviness board chairman, explained the board had called the hearing to determine whether any improvements could be made to the liquor law, or whether it was "fair" as it stands.

"The candidate, rather, is the composite of a small clique of dubiously American but highly purposeful men for whom, as one of them once remarked, Mr. Roosevelt plays the tune that they compose," he declared. "I dislike the tune and distrust its composers."

Discussing his second reason—the Democratic party—he wrote:

"Never in our political history have the gangsters of American politics made so brazen a bid for national power as, through the captured machinery of the Democratic party, they are making this year."

Roosevelt May Visit Big Aircraft Plant

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 5 (AP)—President Roosevelt may leave Wednesday on his second inspection of national defense operations.

Rumors circulated tonight that he might go to Buffalo to inspect aircraft plants which supply a large portion of the nation's fighting planes.

On the way to Buffalo, the president could see the arsenal at Watervliet, N. Y., where the army constructs some of its heaviest guns.

The president will give a luncheon tomorrow for heads of delegations of other American nations to the recent Havana conference. White House officials did not say how many would attend but probably Dr. Leopoldo Melo of Argentina and Pedro Manini Rios of Uruguay would be among them.

Brunswick Reelects Mayor Alfred Harris

BRUNSWICK, Md., Aug. 5 (AP) — Mayor Alfred Harris was reelected by a sweeping majority today over his only opponent, Ernest L. Main, in Brunswick's municipal election.

In addition, five councilmen were named.

Main, a former council member, got only 184 votes in making his third unsuccessful attempt to win the mayoralty post, compared to 1,020 votes for Harris.

Harris, who has already served one term, will continue in office two more years.

Third Ward Councilman E. Bowers was the only hold-over member. He will serve one more year.

Youth Questioned in Death of Niece

MERCER, Pa., Aug. 5, (AP)—A fifteen-year-old boy who never was promoted from the second grade was questioned by police tonight about the tragic death of his three-year-old niece during a game of "doctor."

Coroner James A. Biggins said the death of the child yesterday was caused by water forced from a syringe into her body.

"We were just playing doctor and she died," Dr. Biggins said the boy related. He declared the boy and and eleven-year-old sister of the dead girl were "changing their stories so fast it is hard to tell what charges will be brought."

French Workmen To Be Paid According to Size of Families

VICHY, France, Aug. 5 (AP) — Workmen in the new France will be paid in proportion to the size of their families instead of the usual merit-based salaries, Youth Minister Jean Ybarnegaray announced tonight.

French women, he said, "will return to their prime traditional purpose in life—being in their homes, having children and living only to raise strong useful men."

Fathers will be given preference over bachelors in both public and private employment in this revolutionary move to check France's dwindling birth rate. Many have offered the low birth rate as a big factor in France's military collapse.

The 1940 defeat by Germany was expected to be the prelude to "one of the greatest victories a people ever won over themselves," the minister declared.

France lost 1,500,000 men in the World War, leaving women to fight out their own welfare to the detriment of rearing children.

Since 1910, 500,000 marriages were estimated as wrecked by divorce, with 100,000 other women remaining voluntarily sterile.

He charge that the system in vogue tolerated the "voluntary suppression" of some 600,000 other births, but that the ney system would guarantee every French woman that "the more children she has the more aid she will receive."

Young Roosevelt To Study under Anti-New Deal Lawyers

New York, Aug. 5 (AP)—When and if he passes his bar examinations in October, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., will become a clerk in a Wall Street law firm headed by Eugene L. Carey, self-described "ardent anti- New Dealer."

"He will receive a modest salary at first," Carey explained today in announcing the appointment of the president's 26-year-old son.

His value will be largely a pair of legs until he is seasoned."

Garey added he would not be embarrassed having young Roosevelt work on cases coming before New Deal agencies because "by the time he can be entrusted with an SEC hearing his father will no longer be president, I think."

Zivic Decisions Kenny La Salle

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 5 (AP)—In a slam bang fight that at times resembled a rough longshoreman's contest, Fritzie Zivic, Pittsburgh's outstanding welterweight, won a decision tonight in ten rounds over Kenny LaSalle, of Houston, Tex. Zivic weighed 147½ and LaSalle 151.

LaSalle, who had broken even with Zivic in two former fights, fought a shrewd batle against the two-handed attack unleashed by the Pittsburgher.

State Will Help All Employes in Service

BALTIMORE, Aug. 5 (AP)—The state will do its bit for Maryland state employes called for emergency military training, employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones indicated today.

Every man taken from a state job for extended military or selected service training will get his job back when he returns, Jones said. In addition, the state may work out some plan to make up the difference between the pay the man receives in emergency training and what he would receive in his civilian post.

Jones' announcement followed a conference with Adjt. Gen. Milton A. Reckord of the national guard, to determine how many state employes might be called if the pending conscription bill is approved in Congress.

As a result of the conference, Jones said, a survey will be made seeking additional information on the state's manpower contribution and its effect on state department operation.

Jones said all state employes now in National Guard camps for the twenty-one-day training period were on a leave-with-pay basis, and that the time off would not be taken from their annual allowance.

Kelly Sure Stops Put Brakes on Buckeyes

Running up a score that looks more like basket ball than soft ball, the Kelly Sure Stops defeated the Kelly Buckeyes in the Kelly Springfield Tire Company league last evening, 18 to 17.

Manager Wade was cheered by his team mates as he came to bat in the last inning after seven runs had been scored to tie the score. Wade, with two out landed a nice safe hit just past short stop, scoring Schell Miller who was on second.

The game was tied in the seventh when Arnold Twigg, regular pitcher for the Sure Stops, got a three base hit into right fields scoring Al Weatherholt, Vic Montieth and Ernie Spriggs. Bill White, Bob Wade and Al Steiner scored on hits by these three players. Twigg scored, when Miller hit safely into center field. But despite the excellent hitting of all the other players, it was Twigg's three base clout and Wade's single that actually won the game.

Twigg pitched for the Sure Stops until the fourth inning, when he was moved to short field and replaced by Wade. Del Young started for the losers, but after the Sure Stops got seven hits and scored seven runs in the first inning, Art Gordon manager went to the mound to finish the game.

The Sure Stops had a total of 19 hits, 18 runs and seven errors. The Buckeyes had 13 hits, 17 runs and eight errors.

This was the third game of the second half of the Kelly's interplan season. Duke was umpire and Zarger scorer.

Russia Raises Doubts

Soviet objections to the application of these restrictions had raised doubts that the present agreement would be extended or replaced by a new one. In some trade circles, a complete suspension of commercial relations had been forecast. The statement of Soviet Premier Molotoff last week that he could not "say anything good on Soviet relations with the United States" held ominous implications for the trade negotiations.

British Aircraft Production Equals That of Germany

Great Gains Made since Start of the War, Officials Assert

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 5 —Britain's aircraft production now equals Germany's, it was declared authoritatively today.

Supporting evidence was offered in increasingly violent aerial smashes at potential continental hopping-off places for the Nazi invasion attempt believed close at hand.

Britons, alertly watching channel tides favorably for Adolf Hitler's threatened assault, heard that their airplane factories are running "neck and neck" with the German output and that, with United States and Canadian production, their monthly accumulation of planes actually exceeds that of the Nazis.

Coupled with this were accounts of British planes carrying the war to the Germans with heavier and heavier attacks designed to smash any invasion before it can get started.

Set Oil Plant Afire

Tonight's air ministry communique said British bombers, carrying out their nightly forays, set ablaze an oil plant at Sterkrade in the Ruhr and a hangar at Krefeld last night without the loss of a single plane.

Fourteen tons of high explosive and incendiary bombs were rained on the syithetic oil works at Sterkrade the air ministry announced, by British bombers attacking in waves from before midnight until the early hours of today.

The returning pilots said they first shattered the tanks then fired the oil flowing from them with their incendiaries. They told of earth-jarring explosions followed by flames which lighted up the countryside for miles around.

British planes reported three Messerschmitt fighters shot down, two within range of German anti-aircraft guns on the French coast. One British plane was lost.

The Germans kept up their harassing attacks on Britain today, dropping high explosive and incendiary bombs in isolated districts of the midlands and east England.

Nazi Plans Off Coast

Big forces of Nazis planes approached the southeast coast several times but made no attempt to cross. Machine gun fire was heard in the late afternoon when RAF fighters made contact with the Germans. The invaders broke off the engagement and sped back to the French coast.

One person was killed in German raids last night, but property damage was "negligible."

Authoritative quarters, telling of Britain's stepped-up airplane production, compared the increasing activity of Britain's bombers and that of the German air force.

During a recent month the British dropped 33,431 bombs in Germany and German-occupied territory while the Nazis were dropping 66,987 bombs on Britain.

Despite equality in production, it was pointed out that it might take a long time to overcome Germany's numerical superiority.

BRITISH VIEW OF THINGS TO COME

One of England's leading artists, Montague B. Black, painted this picture of what he predicts a German invasion will be. A giant seagoing tank, its forward guns spouting, rises from the English channel under protection of clouds of Nazi planes. At left other amphibian monsters approach. Black said Nazi propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels inspired this drawing.

Britain Releases Satoru Makihara; Japanese Agent

Difficulties with Tokyo To Come before Commons Today

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Aug. 5—Great Britain tonight released one of its two highly-placed Japanese businessmen who were seized in an empire-wide roundup of Japan's nationals and the Ghurchill government made ready to lay its difficulties with the Japanese before Commons tomorrow.

The first Japanese arrested last Friday was Satoru Makihara, London agent for the vast Mitsubishi interests, and he was the first released amid frowing Japanese protests and demonstrations. Eight other Japanese remained in custody in various parts of the empire.

Insufficient Evidence

It was said reliably the home office decided "evidence available was insufficient to warrant further detention" of Makihara.

Either Prime Minister Churchill or R. A. Butler, undersecretary of state for foreign affairs, will make the statement on British-Japanese relations, it was said.

Before the release of Makihara, hints that Japan would sever diplomatic relations with Great Britain if necessary to obtain satisfactory widened the breach between Japan and Britain.

Japan has made two strong protests over the seizure of two prominent Japanese businessmen in London last Friday and was reported drafting a third and stronger note to include all Japanese taken in custody.

Reprisals Reported

But, to all protests, the British have quietly said the arrests were coincidental with the arrests of British citizens by the Japanese in an espionage inquiry and certainly could not be considered reprisals.

The Japanese embassy said Britain's answer was highly unsatisfactory.

Reports reaching London said the influential Japanese newspaper Nichi Nichi declared that "Japan will, if necessary, break off diplomatic relations with England" if she fails to obtain satisfaction.

INTERPRETING THE WAR NEWS

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

This is bound to be an uneasy week for Britain. Time and tide, which wait on no man, favor a German attempt at invasion as they may not again until next spring.

There will be other high tides in the English channel and North Sea before then, other moonless nights and other prospective fogs to screen a Nazi onset. Yet the time factor will not be the same. The September equinox is only six weeks away.

The Germans seem to be confronted with a choice of attacking now or waiting until next year. If the week passes without a break in the virtual stalemate that has endured since mid-June it will go far toward convincing the world that whatever his own desire, Hitler's generals have ruled out invasion as too risky, until England has been "softened" by blockade.

If that is the case, and there have been strong hints from both Rome and Berlin that it is, it means that the axis military leaders view the invasion problem in about the same dubious way as do many American naval and military men. Such of them as have discussed the matter with this writer in the last six weeks believed that invasion would be the last recourse of German strategy. What most concerned them was whether England could hold out against wholesale air attack (which has not yet developed) or against prolonged blockade.

Pershing's Plea Considered

To cap that view of professional observers there now comes a more precise expression. General Pershing voices an emphatic public plea that fifty or more American destroyers, built during the World war, be turned over to the British to aid them in their hour of peril by "means short of war."

It obviously would take considerable time to make this fleet of sea hornets an active factor in the battle of Britain. Yet the former commander of the American expeditionary force, whose prestige and contacts make him thoroughly familiar with American military and naval opinion, reports that it is "nearly unanimous" in supporting the destroyer transfer.

British Victory Predicted

Behind that Pershing plea clearly lies the conclusion that a Blitzkrieg against England, if attempted during this week of high tides and dark nights, would be beaten off. The help for England he urged could not possibly be made available to participate in the defense of Britain for some weeks, yet he expressed confidence that as a stop-gap until Britain's own destroyer program reaches full production within "a few months," the American destroyers would be of invaluable assistance. They could be used, he said, to "convoy merchant ships, to escort warships and hunt submarines and to repel invasion."

"By sending help to the British we can still hope with confidence to keep the war on the other side of the Atlantic," Pershing said.

Hitler recently told the Reichstag that the German invasion of Norway was the most "daring" military adventure in history. Attempted invasion of England, unless Britons had first been brought close to despair by bombing and starvation, would make the Norwegian campaign a minor operation by contrast. The elements argue for it; but every rule of military prudence against it.

Italy Launches Drive To Destroy England's Bases

Intensive Air Raids Take Place over a Large Area

By The Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 5—Italy launched a systematic aerial offensive to destroy important British bases ringing Italy's African possessions, it was reported today by Stefani, official Italian news agency.

Italian air raids over the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan, Kenya and Aden, wrecked some of Britain's most valuable centers over the week-end, Stefani said.

Among them were remote airfields hastily built because of Italian bombardment of regular airdromes.

Heavy aerial blows also were reported by the command, which said fourteen British ships were shot down in Africa Sunday—including ten in one big battle.

Attack Over Wide Area

British targets stretched over 1,850 miles, from Mersa Matruh, on the Egyptian coast, to the port of Berbera, British Somaliland, on the Gulf of Aden below the Red Sea.

When British warplanes attempted to bomb Libyan troops near the Egyptian frontier, the high command said, Italian fighters shot down seven.

The British attack, it said, caused only "light damage"—four persons were killed and thirty wounded. No Italian planes were reported lost.

(Two Royal Air Force communiques issued at Cairo gave this version:

(British fighters headed off Italian raiders raiding Mers A Matruh, hitting two so badly "it is unlikely that they returned to their base" and compelling others to jettison their bombs in the sea.

Naval Vessel Hit

(In raids on Massaua, a fuel dump was attacked, a direct hit was scored on a naval vessel and "in a low level attack bombs were seen bursting among submarines," the British said.

(British reconnaissance aircraft, escorted by four fighters, met fifty enemy fighters in Eastern Libya . . . three enemy aircraft were shot down . . . one of our fighters is missing.")

"Our bombing formations have devastated and disorganized the most important military objectives, whose efficiency was most useful and essential to the enemy," Stefani declared.

Summary of War News

By The Associated Press

Great Britain met growing Japanese hints of possible rupture of diplomatic relations today (Tuesday) by releasing one of the nine Japanese nationals arrested in swift moves throughout the British empire.

Beyond saying that its evidence was not sufficient to hold Satoru Makihara, London representatives of the tremendous Mitsubishi interests, the British government saved its statement on the tense situation for today's meeting of Commons. Makihara was freed from Brixton prison.

But the British kept behind bars eight other Japanese, while the Japanese kept in custody seven out of fifteen British citizens arrested in what the Japanese said was a drive against British espionage.

Fighting planes and bombers stole the war spotlight.

Blast Munitions Dump

Raiding warplanes blasted a munitions dump at British-owned Gibraltar; Italy began a systematic aerial campaign to destroy important British bases around Mussolini's African possessions; the British reported destructive raids against Italian and German objectives in Africa and Europe; and the Germans told of raids on British anti-aircraft positions, oil tanks and shipyards.

But still the expected German blitzkrieg on England did not come. With the month's highest tides running on Britain's shores, defense watchers were more alert than ever for a German attack by sea.

The British said their monthly accumulation of planes now exceeds that of the Nazis. They said that British aircraft production is on a par with Germany and that Canadian and United States production put it over the Nazi figure.

Latvia in Red Union

Russia added Latvia to the Red union and waited for today to accept Estonia's bid for admission into the U. S. S. R. Lithuania already has been taken in and Estonia's entrance will mark the clean sweep by Russia of the three Baltic states.

Bulgaria and Rumania will reach an agreement by Saturday under which southern Dobruja will be returned to Bulgaria, sources close to the Bulgarian government said. This settlement was ordered by Adolf Hitler—and Rumania still has to negotiate on Hitler's orders with Hungary for Transylvania.

A British dispatch said a Danish ship with "several" persons aboard struck a mine and sank Sunday night while leaving Copenhagen harbor. The passengers were believed safe. Copenhagen port traffic was suspended yesterday.

France, striving to rise from defeat, will pay her citizens in proportion to the size of their families instead of the usual merit-based salaries, youth minister Jean Ybarnegaray announced. He said French woman would return to their "prime traditional purpose of life—being in their homes, having children and living only to raise strong useful men."

Greeks Stirred by Reports of Plot

Effort To Overthrow Small Balkan Nation Frustrated

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Aug. 5 (AP)—Bulgaria and Rumania, bowing to the will of Adolf Hitler after twenty-seven years of territorial controversy, will reach an agreement by Saturday returning southern Dobruja to Bulgaria, sources close to the Bulgarian government asserted today.

Dobruja went to Rumania in 1913 after Bulgaria's defeat in the second Balkan war.

Greece, another Balkan nation, was stirred by a report of a frustrated plot to overthrow the authoritarian regime of Premier General John Metaxas.

The well informed newspaper Kathimerini said an anti-Metaxas group was banished after it was found plotting to seize control of Greece.

Following Hitler's instructions to Balkan diplomats at Salzburg last week that they settle their differences peaceably—and soon—preliminary negotiations were ended today, these sources said.

Balkan experts said Bulgaria would receive her reward for leaning toward the Rome-Berlin axis, a trend Rumania recently copied. German support for Bulgaria was reflected in the newspaper Slovo. It reported that Premier Bogdan Philoff and Foreign Minister Ivan Popoff last week expressed to Hitler Bulgaria's loyalty to the Rome-Berlin axis.

Soviet Russia already has taken back from Rumania the big province of Bessarabia, to which she never renounced her claim. Rumania faces a third territorial loss, the province of Transylvania, which Hungary wants back.

Authoritative sources predicted Bulgaria would get back all of her former territory, remaking the 1913 frontier.

lays sit in six or more of the planes day and night, ready for instant action aloft.

"Our main job," the flight commander explained, "is to accompany bombers which come from farther inland for business over England."

I questioned a young flier about the actual fighting. His comment was:

"It's becoming harder and harder to make them (the British) come out and fight. We almost never have dogfights over our side of the channel. We must go over to their side, or well over England, to get them out."

Bag 73 British Planes

He said he had brought down three of seventy-three planes credited to his squadron since the war began.

I watched the dive bombers in a demonstration. They have sirens attached to each wheel support, operated by tiny propellors.

They climbed to 15,000 feet, then screamed down at us making the most horrifying noise I ever heard. The sound swelled as the planes came down until the whole sky seemed filled with it.

The planes pulled out of the dive and went over us at a hedge-clipping elevation, wavering and dodging to show how they evade anti-aircraft fire.

German officers said the Stukas are of tremendous effect because of their extreme accuracy, the awful force with which they hurl their bombs and the "utter demoralization" they cause among troops.

Thirty Stukas in the group we saw claim to have sunk "several times 10,000 tons" of English shipping, and forced the surrender of 10,000 Netherlands troops within an hour near Dortrecht.

Edward J. Flynn Scores Willkie

Objects To Being Called "Boss" by Republican Candidate

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (AP)—Edward J. Flynn, new national Democratic chairman, today characterized as "this twaddle," Wendell L. Willkie's description of him as "Boss Flynn," and accused the Republican standard bearer of "hypocrisy."

He said Willkie had been a "paying member" of the Grover Cleveland Democratic club in New York, and had run for county committeeman—with Mrs. Willkie—on the same ticket as Postmaster General James A. Farley and Frank Walker, former treasurer of the Democratic National Committee.

"This twaddle about this, that or the other boss or political machine is silly," Flynn said in a prepared statement. "If Mr. Willkie thinks that he can convince the American people that President Roosevelt is being guided or influenced by any political bosses or political machine he is due for a very sad awakening."

"Mr. Willkie's sudden distaste for 'machine politics,' as he terms it, is pure political expediency.

"The facts prove, however, that Mr. Willkie will use Tammany Hall, the Democratic party, or the Republican party to advance what for the moment will further his own personal interest, or the utility interests, which he so nobly represents.

"The issues facing the American people are far too serious for such trivial treatment. I don't think that the American people want to elevate to the presidency a man who can be guilty of that kind of hypocricy."

had greater resources than the Germans."

But, he added, France was crushed because she had adopted the "candy stick" theory of government.

He added that "when a child cries you give him a piece of candy and try to quiet him."

Willkie did not elaborate except to say that this country's defense problems, like that of France, was primarily one of production.

There was applause and scattered boos at Willkie's remark about Wallace. The candidate shook his head and frowned slightly.

In his talk with farm leaders, Willkie said at a press conference, he listened to widely diverse views on farm problems and gained much information which would aid him in writing the farm section of his acceptance address and a later formal farm speech somewhere in the middle west.

He said he had advised a group of about seventy midwestern farm leaders that "as a candidate for president and as the next president" he wanted to obtain the viewpoint of men who actually were farmers.

The conferees, who came from ten states and included a group of governors and candidates for governor, was held in the square, ornate office of Governor George A. Wilson.

Politics Not Discussed

Willkie, seated in the governor's own chair at the head of his desk, was reported to have suggested at one point that a solution of the farm problem had nothing to do with "political feasibility or expediency." He told his press conference that politics had not been discussed at the conference and that he believed such meetings should be free from partisanship.

The nominee said he had expressed no views of his own at the farm meeting.

Appearing at a luncheon of Republican county chairmen, the nominee was loudly applauded when he said that he would seek the viewpoints of many others "in the solution of all the problems I shall approach in the next four years, the next eight years, but not the next twelve years."

Willkie reiterated that his drive for the presidency "is not a campaign but a crusade which must be approached with all the moral fervor of a crusade."

Sen. Lucas "Amazed"

In a radio address replying to Lindbergh, Senator Lucas (D-Ill) said tonight that he was "not only amazed but somewhat shocked by Colonel Lindbergh's attitude of complacency toward Adolf Hitler."

If, he said, "the American people are looking for guidance and counsel in this hour of uncertainty, I say with all deference to Colonel Lindbergh, that you should stop, look and listen before you follow this youthful man who blossomed overnight into an oracle who instructs the world and his country on such momentous problems as war, statesmanship and diplomacy. xxx

On the question of Pershing's proposal, Pittman said: "No one can doubt the soundness of his statement that 'if the destroyers help save the British fleet they may save us from the danger and hardships of another war.'"

The Nevada legislator went on to say that the "British fleet is the British empire," and that without it Great Britain "will cease to exist, except possibly in political slavery," and the British dominions and possessions will be at the mercy of Hitler and Japan.

British May Lose—Fleet

"The British ambassador, in his address at Yale University recently stated," he said, "that it is possible Great Britain may have to surrender its fleet to Hitler. That spirit does not encourage the United States to make fifty destroyers available to Great Britain. If such a surrender is possible we had better have our ships on this side of the ocean and under our own control."

Wheeler, on the contrary, was outspokenly critical of the Pershing suggestion.

"If we want to get into the war," he said, "of course we ought to begin by selling destroyers and battleships. Every step we are taking and every step that General Pershing, Secretary Knox and Secretary Stimson are advocating is a direct step toward war. Unless the American people wake up, we'll be in the war before the election—instead of after."

Highway Defenses To Be Discussed

BALTIMORE, Aug. 5 (AP)—Highways — lifelines for modern mechanized armies — will be discussed from a defense standpoint tomorrow at a conference of the State Roads Commission and a representative of the Federal Bureau of Roads.

Ezra B. Whitman, chairman of the Maryland Commission, said all plans were in a tentative stage, but indicated that the conference would deal with the problem of bringing Maryland roads up to the standard required for national defense.

In this connection, the federal government favors a weight-carrying capacity of 36,000 pounds for highways, along with the construction of ten-foot shoulders on certain roads. Some Maryland roads were closed to heavy traffic last spring after they had been weakened by thaws.

The conference is in anticipation of the allotment of federal funds for state road work.

Dispensers Advocate Old-Time Saloon

BALTIMORE, Aug. 5 (AP)—Strong sentiment for a return to the single-license system and the old-time saloon was expressed by Baltimore liquor dispensers today at a hearing by the city board of liquor license commissioners.

Some dispensers pay $500 for a six-day a week license, a seven-day restaurant license costs $750 a year, and beer-only licenses now cost $60 a year.

Charles T. Leviness board chairman, explained the board had called the hearing to determine whether any improvements could be made to the liquor law, or whether it was "fair" as it stands.

said his first reason for turning to Willkie was that the Democratic candidate "is not Mr. Roosevelt."

"The candidate, rather, is the composite of a small clique of dubiously American but highly purposeful men for whom, as one of them once remarked, Mr. Roosevelt plays the tune that they compose," he declared. "I dislike the tune and distrust its composers."

Discussing his second reason—the Democratic party—he wrote:

"Never in our political history have the gangsters of American politics made so brazen a bid for national power as, through the captured machinery of the Democratic party, they are making this year."

It urged voluntary enlistments for a one-year period, with army pay increased from $21 to a point not less than the $30 monthly paid to CCC enrollees.

Roosevelt May Visit Big Aircraft Plant

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Aug. 5 (AP)—President Roosevelt may leave Wednesday on his second inspection of national defense operations.

Rumors circulated tonight that he might go to Buffalo to inspect aircraft plants which supply a large portion of the nation's fighting planes.

On the way to Buffalo, the president could see the arsenal at Watervliet, N. Y., where the army constructs some of its heaviest guns.

The president will give a luncheon tomorrow for heads of delegations of other American nations to the recent Havana conference. White House officials did not say how many would attend but probably Dr. Leopoldo Melo of Argentina and Pedro Manini Rios of Uruguay would be among them.

Brunswick Reelects Mayor Alfred Harris

BRUNSWICK, Md., Aug. 5 (AP) — Mayor Alfred Harris was reelected by a sweeping majority today over his only opponent, Ernest L. Main, in Brunswick's municipal election.

In addition, five councilmen were named.

Main, a former council member, got only 184 votes in making his third unsuccessful attempt to win the mayoralty post, compared to 1,020 votes for Harris.

Harris, who has already served one term, will continue in office two more years.

Third Ward Councilman E. Bowers was the only hold-over member. He will serve one more year.

Youth Questioned in Death of Niece

MERCER, Pa., Aug. 5. (AP)—A fifteen-year-old boy who never was promoted from the second grade was questioned by police tonight about the tragic death of his three-year-old niece during a game of "doctor."

Coroner James A. Biggins said the death of the child yesterday was caused by water forced from a syringe into her body.

"We were just playing doctor and she died," Dr. Biggins said the boy related. He declared the boy and and eleven-year-old sister of the dead girl were "changing their stories so fast it is hard to tell what charges will be brought."

French Workmen To Be Paid According to Size of Families

VICHY, France, Aug. 5 (AP) — Workmen in the new France will be paid in proportion to the size of their families instead of the usual merit-based salaries, Youth Minister Jean Ybarnegaray announced tonight.

French women, he said, "will return to their prime traditional purpose in life—being in their homes, having children and living only to raise strong useful men."

Fathers will be given preference over bachelors in both public and private employment in this revolutionary move to check France's dwindling birth rate. Many have offered the low birth rate as a big factor in France's military collapse.

The 1940 defeat by Germany was expected to be the prelude to "one of the greatest victories a people ever won over themselves," the minister declared.

France lost 1,500,000 men in the World War, leaving women to fight out their own welfare to the detriment of rearing children.

Since 1910, 500,000 marriages were estimated as wrecked by divorce, with 100,000 other women remaining voluntarily sterile.

He charge that the system in vogue tolerated the "voluntary suppression" of some 600,000 other births, but that the ney system would guarantee every French woman that "the more children she has the more aid she will receive."

Young Roosevelt To Study under Anti-New Deal Lawyers

New York, Aug. 5 (AP)—When and if he passes his bar examinations in October, Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., will become a clerk in a Wall Street law firm headed by Eugene L. Carey, self-described "ardent anti- New Dealer."

"He will receive a modest salary at first," Carey explained today in announcing the appointment of the president's 26-year-old son.

His value will be largely a pair of legs until he is seasoned."

Garey added he would not be embarrassed having young Roosevelt work on cases coming before New Deal agencies because "by the time he can be entrusted with an SEC hearing his father will no longer be president, I think."

Zivic Decisions Kenny La Salle

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 5 (AP)—In a slam bang fight that at times resembled a rough longshoreman's contest, Fritzie Zivic, Pittsburgh's outstanding welterweight, won a decision tonight in ten rounds over Kenny LaSalle, of Houston, Tex. Zivic weighed 147½ and LaSalle 151.

LaSalle, who had broken even with Zivic in two former fights, fought a shrewd batle against the two-handed attack unleashed by the Pittsburgher.

State Will Help All Employes in Service

BALTIMORE, Aug. 5 (AP)—The state will do its bit for Maryland state employes called for emergency military training, employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones indicated today.

Every man taken from a state job for extended military or selected service training will get his job back when he returns, Jones said. In addition, the state may work out some plan to make up the difference between the pay the man receives in emergency training and what he would receive in his civilian post.

Jones' announcement followed a conference with Adjt. Gen. Milton A. Reckord of the national guard, to determine how many state employes might be called if the pending conscription bill is approved in Congress.

As a result of the conference, Jones said, a survey will be made seeking additional information on the state's manpower contribution and its effect on state department operation.

Jones said all state employes now in National Guard camps for the twenty-one-day training period were on a leave-with-pay basis, and that the time off would not be taken from their annual allowance.

Kelly Sure Stops Put Brakes on Buckeyes

Running up a score that looks more like basket ball than soft ball, the Kelly Sure Stops defeated the Kelly Buckeyes in the Kelly Springfield Tire Company league last evening, 18 to 17.

Manager Wade was cheered by his team mates as he came to bat in the last inning after seven runs had been scored to tie the score. Wade, with two out landed a nice safe hit just past short stop, scoring Schell Miller who was on second.

The game was tied in the seventh when Arnold Twigg, regular pitcher for the Sure Stops, got a three base hit into right fields scoring Al Weatherholt, Vic Montieth and Ernie Spriggs. Bill White, Bob Wade and Al Steiner scored on hits by these three players. Twigg scored, when Miller hit safely into center field. But despite the excellent hitting of all the other players, it was Twigg's three base clout and Wade's single that actually won the game.

Twigg pitched for the Sure Stops until the fourth inning, when he was moved to short field and replaced by Wade. Del Young started for the losers, but after the Sure Stops got seven hits and scored seven runs in the first inning, Art Gordon manager went to the mound to finish the game.

The Sure Stops had a total of 19 hits, 18 runs and seven errors. The Buckeyes had 13 hits, 17 runs and eight errors.

This was the third game of the second half of the Kelly's interplan season. Duke was umpire and Zarger scorer.

the negotiations involved a possible settlement of difficulties between the two governments over the curtailment of exports of machine tools and other equipment from the United States, which now are subject to an export licensing system to conserve supplies needed in the national defense programs here.

Russia Raises Doubts

Soviet objections to the application of these restrictions had raised doubts that the present agreement would be extended or replaced by a new one. In some trade circles, a complete suspension of commercial relations had been forecast. The statement of Soviet Premier Molotoff last week that he could not "say anything good on Soviet relations with the United States" held ominous implications for the trade negotiations.

W. W. Johnson Fined $5 For Auto Law Violation

Found guilty of driving on the wrong side of Christie road, William W. Johnson, of 540 North Centre street, yesterday was fined $5 and cost by Magistrate Oliver H. Bruce, Jr., in Trial Magistrate court. A charge of driving under the influence of liquor was dismissed.

State Officer John H. Doud made the arrest Sunday evening at nine o'clock after Johnson's car collided with a machine operated by Richard Dean, of Lonaconing.

In Raleigh, N. C., a farmer recently hitched his horse to a parking meter, dropped his nickel in the slot, and "lowed as how" that ought to take care of the horse.

Marry A. Monley, the president of the fair association, was busier than a hen with a dozen biddies, trying to get everything ready for opening day and also his annual chicken dinner last night for owners, trainers, officials, jockeys, newspapermen and others.

Oh yes, just to let readers know, that the state of Maryland is keeping an eye out for its share of taxes, Gateway Chatter met a representative from the State Tax Department.

James L. "Pete" Barrow, manager of the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Company, was busy getting several telephones installed to handle thousands of calls during the races. Vogel Case Will Probably Be Tried In Federal Court

The case of Mrs. Mary Catherine Vogel against two out-of-state insurance companies for claims totalling $13,700 will probably be tried in federal court here in September.

The case was automatically switched from circuit court to the federal court upon the petition of attorneys representing the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and the Mutual Life Insurance Company, Chief Judge D. Lindley Sloan said yesterday.

Mrs. Vogel filed suit for insurance carried by her husband, the late Frederick Vogel, who was found dead in his office last January. Death was caused by a pistol wound. A note reading "Cleaning gun. Went off," was found in his office.

Authorities gave a verdict of accidental death.

Camel's extra mildness, extra coolness, extra flavor, and extra smoking are aces with her—and with millions of other smokers.

You see, Camel's costlier tobaccos are matchlessly blended into a cigarette that is slower-burning. That means freedom from the harshness and irritating qualities of excess heat. Instead of hot, flat-tasting smoke, Camels give a full flavor and fragrance that hold their appeal to the last puff...to the last extra puff, for Camels, being slower-burning, give more puffs per pack (see panel at left). So turn to the slower-burning cigarette and get those extras your smoke-money can buy!

Aggressive Campaign By GOP Assured

WITH possibly the most efficient national organization it has ever known the Republican party is preparing to wage an aggressive and thorough-going campaign in all parts of the nation to insure the election of its nominees for president and vice president of the United States.

Already the machinery has been set in motion for the building of a highly effective instrument to accomplish this purpose.

Aside from the already proved wide appeal of Wendell L. Willkie, the nominee for president, and the assurance that he will put forth a most vigorous contest for the presidency, his personal efforts will be ably seconded by his running mate, Senator Charles L. McNary, and by the full cooperation of every element within the party.

Seldom has any nominee aroused so great an enthusiasm as has Mr. Willkie among the party leaders or had pledges of a support so undivided.

With Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican leader in the House of Representatives, as chairman of the Republican National Committee, and with John Hamilton, former national chairman, as his aide, the national committee will function with full effectiveness.

Its efforts will be supplemented by the highly representative campaign advisory committee, headed by Governor Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota, temporary chairman and "keynoter" of the recent Republican national convention. The most complete cooperation between these two bodies is assured.

Nor can it be doubted that the rank and file members of the party, together with countless Democrats, disgusted with the New Deal, will rally behind the splendid leadership that has been provided.

Demand and Competition Grow Together

THE WORLD TEXTILE TREND is now definitely toward man-made fibers, according to William C. Appleton, president of the American Viscose Corporation, Wilmington, Del. This development, he adds, is sure to be accentuated further in the future.

Analyzing the first half of 1940, Appleton said that period had witnessed a great deal of work done on developing new fabrics and outlets for yarn and staple. He observed that the industry now appeared to be on the threshold of generally increased use of rayon in various fields, including flat knitting, automobile materials and certain industrial applications.

The pronounced preference for rayon and the other new textiles, Appleton noted, was indicated even in countries where there are ample supplies of natural fibers. He pointed out that the present inventory position of the rayon industry in this country was particularly good, though there had been a natural hesitancy due to the European crisis.

All this is to the good from the local viewpoint, considering that a big synthetic textile plant is situated here. But the fact that this report comes from the head of a large competing concern is a reminder that as the demand for the product grows, competition becomes all the keener. It is this competition, provided and stimulated by private initiative and private industry, which should be encouraged, that makes for steady volume production and that, in turn, brings the products within the reach of the masses.

Passive Campaigning For Army Recruits

ONE of the arguments advanced in behalf of national conscription is that recruiting has gone on for some time for the regular army and the national guard without bringing in the large number of men deemed desirable for the expansion sought in the plans for these forces. But that recruiting has never taken on a really serious campaigning stage. The possibilities of an energetic advertising campaign were never considered.

In this connection, it is of interest to note that governmental advertising, which has branched out in recent years from the field of routine legal notices to the promotion of the industrial or vacation advantages of states and cities, is now being used to stimulate the payment of taxes, according to the Municipal Finance Officers' Association of the United States and Canada.

The state of Michigan, Ingham county in Michigan, the city of Detroit and Greenburgh, N. Y., are among the governmental units reporting that advertising campaigns resulted in greatly increased tax collections. Newspapers, the radio and billboards were advertising mediums used in the campaigns.

Michigan's campaign began in 1935, when $75,000 was appropriated by the state legislature for a four-month program to educate taxpayers concerning a ten-year installment-payment plan for delinquent taxes. As a result of the campaign, more than $15,000,000 in cash was collected, and taxes representing $60,0000,000 were placed on the ten-year plan.

In 1936 Michigan appropriated $15,000 to urge through advertisements the payment of the second installment under the ten-year plan, while in 1937 an appropriation of $25,000 was spent in calling attention to installment payments due, and to inform taxpayers of minor changes in the act allowing installment payments.

Ingham county spent $5,000 several years ago in a special campaign to collect $3,000,000 in delinquent taxes. During the campaign, more than $2,000,000 was either collected in cash or placed on the ten-year plan. Detroit has conducted similar tax collection campaigns.

Greenburgh used 4,500 lines of display advertising in local newspapers in March to stimulate tax collections, and reported to the association that for April the collections amounted to seventy-four per cent of the levy compared with sixty-nine per cent in April of 1939.

There are those who believe, in the light of such proved results, of which the tax collection campaign are only one of many, that recruiting of volunteers has never had a real chance and that, if it were gone about in a more vigorous manner, based upon the wealth of experience with other properly conducted advertising campaigns, the results would be far more satisfactory.

Wild Driving as A Social Error

EMILY POST, who is commonly associated with such questions as which is the right tool for tackling artichokes, and whether the free throw is legal when eating salted nuts, has issued a set of six rules for motorists, appearing in This Week. At first blush, Em might be thought to be out of her orbit, and yet, on second thought, it seems entirely proper that she concern herself with driving manners.

Manners have everything to do with safety on the streets. Miss Post's list of Don'ts includes, hogging the road; parking so that cars before and behind can not maneuver easily; presuming on the chivalry of men, if one is a woman driver; leaving bright lights on to blind the oncoming driver; paging the girl friend with a horn from the curb, and drinking before driving. Nothing new—but having the new authority of the Post imprimatur.

Many an evil—like drink—is better controlled by the force of accepted custom than of statutes. If Em can get it across that wild driving and the like are social errors as well as violations of the law, she will have rendered a great public service. It is strange that she and her recognized power for good have not been enlisted in this field before now.

Dr. Goebbels's ministry of Propaganda and Enlightenment certainly has a tough problem to solve trying to censor those British bombing raids so the German people won't know about them!

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder," wrote the poet. But, then, he never received a postcard in August from a vacationing friend bearing the news "we have to use blankets every night."

A Mr. H. G. Shaffer of Pierce City, Mo., says he has invented a parachute that cannot go wrong no matter what happens. Just a fairly reliable parachute is a terrible thing.

An Italian "token" army is to accompany the Nazi blitzkriegers against England. This is the first time in history that invading troops were accompanied by hitch-hikers.

For ages men accepted plausible theories and did no thinking. Then science said: "Here's the right theory." So they accepted it and felt educated and again quit thinking.

In eighteen months, the cost of Minnesota's state government drops $10,000,000 under the Boy Governor, Stassen. This can only be ascribed to his inexperience.

Judging by reports from that country, Rumania is pro-Red on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Sundays. And pro-Nazi on alternate days.

Of course, Doc Einstein becomes an American because he likes democracy. Democracy, by the way, is our theory, and we think well of it.

The United States now has 2,655 airports, statistics show. It no longer is a hop between them—just a bounce.

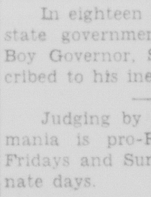

"At the present state of the world," advises a commentator, "anything may happen to anybody at any time." May your eye! It does.

Led by the Nose

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The wise men of the science of psychology say that the memory is most easily led by the nose . . . and everybody knows that.

If you follow your nose it leads you back into the past. It is no forward looking organ, has no creative imagination, cannot foretell future smells, future perfumes. . . . For example:

Marshall Maslin

A pear orchard in bloom: Reminds you of days in the country when you were a child. Reminds certain gentlemen of middle age, who fought in that other war, of a deadly gas that smelled like the faint perfume of pear blossoms.

* * *

Passing a bakery in the early morning hours: Reminds this writer of long ago when he rose before dark to peddle newspapers and the first kid to snatch a paper off the press pedaled like the dickens down to McGrath's bakery to trade it for half a dozen warm doughnuts.

* * *

Burning horse hoofs: The village blacksmith shop. Dark except for the glow of metal in the forge. The blacksmith with the leather apron, the sturdy horses, being allowed to pump the bellows and the curling smoke and the unforgetable odor as the hot shoe was set on the horse's hoof.

* * *

A wet doggy smell: Washing your reluctant dog. Or going swimming with the dog and having him plunge in first and come out grinning all over and shake himself all over us. "Get out, Rover!"

* * *

A sweet wet smell: The earth after a soaking rain. Tramping the fields and orchards in the autumn. A crisp apple slug out from under the leaves. Golden pumpkins rich against the brown background of the earth.

* * *

The sour smell of the vinegar works, the warm smell of the barn with Bossie chewing her cud and the pigeons tur-rucky-ta-kooing in the loft overhead, that antiseptic smell of hospital operating rooms, the ozone in the air after lightning flashes, coffee warehouses, breweries, busy docks and plowed fields. . . . Terror, pain, joy, uplift, depression, calm reminiscence—to all these the memory is led, by the nose.

America's Oldest Ghost, a Dwarf, Is Seen Again

By EDWIN C. HILL

Do you believe in ghosts? Down in Beaufort, South Carolina, folks are saying that the oldest white ghost in America has been seen again. It is the ghost of the dwarf, La Chere, who sailed over from France in Jean Ribaut's square-rigger. It's a curious fact, as Marion Lowndes says in Harper's Bazaar, that, if ghosts are hallucinations, it's always the same ghost that reappears in different generations to different people.

Edwin C. Hill

Since the fourth Mary died on the gallows tree, as the sad old ballad reports, a cuddling child has been creeping in and out of the dark, tartan-hung beds of Glamis. The White Lady of the Hohenzollerns is a famous family ghost who appeared through four centuries, like pride before a fall, to the fierce-eyed kings and emperors of Germany. Whenever a Duke of Argyll dies, there are always some who look for a gallery with its crew of three to come sailing up Loch Fyne, that Campbell galley that's pictured in the family arms. In Denmark, Abel the Fratricide is still seen now and then walking in the woods of Poole near Schleswig.

In 1914 there was the remarkable instance of the Angels of Mons, when many men thought they saw the same thing—phantom troops, the ghosts of men slain at Agincourt. Arrows seemed to fly from their long bows and some heard the whizz of arrows and battle cries.

Absorbed Vibrations

Some people explain ghosts by saying that the walls of old houses absorb the vibrations of certain lives and give them back again from time to time when there's a receptive consciousness about. According to this story, the vibrations are an echo of strange characters of the intense feeling which once "charged" the spot. Just the way another person exposed to the vibrations of a blow on the head might see stars. There aren't any stars and, according to this argument, there's aren't any ghosts—only vibrations and effects.

Others lay their ghosts with theories about glands. Excessive thyroid activity, they say, results in visions. As far as that goes, you can be perfectly healthy and stimulate your mind's eye to a "dim" inward sight, simply by thinking hard of a friend's face. Drugs will produce the same effect; or delirium or excess of alcohol. In all these events the nerves of sight are stimulated not by light waves but by thought waves or by chemicals, and a distinct impression results.

The eyes of fever see a skeleton shaking its bones to the "Hominy Hop." The eyes of opium see cool cascades swinging through the back rooms of a wretched little Chinese tailor's shop. The eyes of grief—or, if you prefer, excess adrenalin—saw Hamlet's father walking on the ramparts of Elsinore.

* * *

Margot's Quip

The chances are that it will be a long time before ghosts are explained to everyone's satisfaction. One recalls the celebrated quip of Margot Asquith when asked if she believed in ghosts. "Certainly not," was her tart reply. "Their appearance is against them." Meanwhile, however, people will continue to see ghosts, as they have always done in all ages and in all countries.

It was Thackeray, a great believer, who remarked, "It's all very well for you who have never seen a ghost, to talk as you do, but had you seen what I have seen, what I have witnessed, you would hold a different opinion."

Among several classic and fascinating stories, Harper's Bazaar recalls the one about the little old lady with the long nose in Wiscasset, Maine. Under the shingled roofs of the house where she is still seen, she raised a family of six sons. Through the bitter winters and unadventerous summers, she kept house ably and grimly for her husband and the boys. She had no feeling for any diversions that might have eased her lot, but she did have endurance. Her youngest son was lost at sea off India; the next one died at home. Before the Civil war had lasted a year another son's horse with stirrups reversed was following his master's coffin to the graveyard.

Had Endurance

But she had endurance, and she went on counting her white thin silver spoons and scrubbing her white paneled rooms and keeping herself to herself. Another son died of drink, and another became a kind of recluse, and the last one had pneumonia. Her husband, once able and full of authority, ended his days as a fretful invalid in a wing chair.

The old lady looked round her beautiful, lifeless rooms, at her carved cornices and her elegant mahoganies, and her gold wallpaper shining in the lamplight. Outside she heard the yellow elm branches lashing in the wind and she felt how the storm spent itself against the long, jointed clapboards of the plastered facade of her beloved house.

"Everything has failed me," she said when she was dying, "except this house. If I can, I'll come back."

* * *

A Strange House

Her house is there still, very much as she left it, but there is something strange about it. For one thing, no one ever feels entirely alone in it. It also happens that a roomful of people will fall silent simultaneously. If there are dogs around they whine and the fur rises on their back. Presumably steps are heard, presently, coming slowly down the stairs.

One summer day, two sisters were sitting on the terrace in the back of the house.

"Who on earth it that?" said the other.

"No one's there."

"Oh, yes, there is," the first insisted. "Or there was. Didn't you see her looking out of that window? A face with a long nose, and a little white cap on her head?"

No one was in the house when they looked, but the same visitor was seen by a tenant several years later. She thought it was a caller and hurried into the parlor only to find that the little long-nosed woman in the rocking chair had disappeared before her eyes.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

Disaffection in the South Prompts Unique Work There by New Dealers

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

For the first time since Civil war days Democratic party leaders are discussing plans for a vigorous campaign to hold the Solid South in the coming presidential election.

Joseph Martin

Heretofore they've reckoned that the southern states didn't need much attention; that they were bound to go Democratic, anyway.

Now, however, they're getting reports of considerable southern grumbling over the Roosevelt-Wallace ticket. It also is well known that Republican Chairman Joseph Martin is going to make a hard fight throughout Dixie for Willkie and McNary. In the past, the Republicans, like the Democrats, have paid little attention to that part of the country; not because they didn't wish they could win it over, but because they didn't believe they could possibly do so.

Southern Republicans' votes have been prized at G. O. P. conventions, inasmuch as they were useful in swinging nominations, but it wasn't considered that there were enough of them to be worth trying for in November.

This time, though, with Chairman Martin as Republicanly hopeful as he evidently is, and with their own local observers in the southland hinting at a certain amount of uneasiness, New Deal strategists are tending to the view that southern voters need some intensive cultivation.

Southern Statesmanship

Southern statesmanship, as distinguished from the rank-and-file of the electorate, isn't expected, even by the Willkieites, to do much out-and-out bolting from the Democratic nominees.

It's largely disgruntled, but it can't abandon the Democratic party in favor of any other party that suits it any better.

Apparently, like Senator (Cotton Ed) Smith, it simply will resort to 'passive resistance," a sit-down strike. It will stay on the premises but it won't do a lick for the Democratic ticket. That is to say, to a considerable extent it won't.

New Deal leaders recognize that such a situation requires some counteracting.

Just how they'll go about it isn't quite apparent yet.

For one thing, their national committee is scarcely functioning, with Chairman Farley just quitting. They doubtless trust in providence, too, that the southern atmosphere presently will improve, from their standpoint.

Yet they generally agree that this isn't a year in which the south can safely be neglected.

Republican Claims

The Willkieites probably claim too much, as to Dixie.

To hear their spokesman talk about it, one would guess that they'll clean up everything below the Mason-Dixon line. They themselves undoubtedly don't really anticipate all that.

Herbert Hoover actually did carry four southern states in 1929, but to defeat Al Smith in that year, he didn't have to have them.

If Willkie can do that well, he and Joe Martin unquestionably will be well satisfied. They'll depend on that showing, plus what they're counting on in the north to put Wendell and Charley McNary over.

I believe they truly are optimistic as to Texas, where they're convinced the voters are deeply resentful of the fate of Vice President (Cactus Jack) Garner. It's understandable that they maye be.

Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina also are conspicuously mentioned (by Republicans) as G. O. P. possibilities. They have no outstanding citizens of their own who were as ostentatiously slaughtered as the Chicago convention as Garner was. Nevertheless, the Republicans have hopes of them.

At all events, Willkie clubs are being organized all over Dixie. The G. O. P. at least considers Dixie worth fighting for, for the first time in two or three generations.

An the Democrats consider it doubtful enough to be worth figthing for, convention appeared in his paper and may be assumed to represent his views:

"The pretense that President Roosevelt was drafted for a third term is so hollow, thin and transparent as to be silly. It was planned, directed and accomplished by federal office holders with the president's aid and under direction, climaxed and rounded out by political machine heads, such 'humanitarians' as Frank Hague of Jersey City and Mayor Kelly of Chicago . . .

"When the President had been 'drafted,' he in turn 'drafted' a Republican member of his Cabinet for Vice President and shoved him down the throat of the convention . . .

"That was the convention and there is the ticket. A Democrat who has been accustomed to holding his nose at times when voting his ticket; who upon occasion voted it because, while not satisfactory, it was better than the opposition, would now feel less disturbed if this thing has been done openly, honestly and frankly.

"To couple it all with an air of sacrifice and sanctity; of innocence and of ignorance as the president sought to do in his acceptance speech, taxes one's patience and leads us to wonder what is to become of a country whose head indulges in such deceptions."

If the third-term business is discussed any more realistically than in the above, it probably will be by some other disillusioned Democrat whose faith in President Roosevelt and the New Deal has been shattered and whose pen drips a stronger mixture of vitriol and T. N. T. than that of his West Virginia compatriot.

Realistically Discussed

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

The most plainspoken among those who oppose New Deal aspirations for a third term are Democrats of the Jefferson and Jacksonian variety who have always prided themselves on their party regularity. They are not going to be regular this year, and they don't mince words in saying so.

Former Gov. John J. Cornwell of West Virginia, who is a part owner of the Hampshire Review, a newspaper published at Romney, W. Va., was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention in Chicago. What he saw and heard there didn't please him a bit, and he is going to display his displeasure in a practical way. He is going to oppose the re-election of President Roosevelt.

Johnson Decries Political Catch In Draft Act

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

CINCINNATI, Aug. 5—When I left Washington Saturday the dope was that the selective service bill would pass with a neat little safety catch—there are to be no actual selections until after election to "give the volunteer system" a chance to work.

Hugh Johnson

This is pretty awful. If it were only a question of filling up the regular army, the recruiting stations, aided by a ballyhoo drive, could doubtless do it. But the job is much greater than that. It is to induct into military service and train several hundred thousand men as soon as they can be equipped and accommodated.

The idea of selection—as distinguished from volunteering — is not merely to get men. It is also to preserve civilian morale—to get those men with the least possible interfernce with normal life, and preserving in the process the utmost possible dignity and self-respect both in those who are selected to march with the colors and those who are selected to take care of their families and serve in the activities behind the battle line.

Seen as Mistake

If there is anything to the principle of selection, volunteering has no place in the picture. Selection is scientific—not emotional. We can't afford any distinction between those who volunteer and those who wait to be told what the nation wants them to do. We can't afford the recruiting slogan we had to silence in 1917—"be a went and not a sent." If we do, we brand the stigma of either "conscript" or "slacker" on any man who serves the real principle of selection. We make a joke out of Woodrow Wilson's, "it is not a conscript of the unwilling, but selection from a nation that has volunteered in mass."

It is a mistake to try volunteering and selection at the same time. A recruiting drive is a tom-tom drumming up of emotional enthusiasm. It requires some hysteria and with that some sneering disfavor of those who don't rush to sign up. Some of their gals question their valor and there are lifted eyebrows everywhere. The volunteers are the heroes. The men who believe calmer government representations are the rats.

If there is anything in the scientific principle of selection no man should be permitted to volunteer until after the registration and classification. After any general classification of men between, for example, the the ages of 18 and 50, there would be several millions in class 1A—men who could go with no disturbance of domestic, economic or educational life.

* * *

Guess Based on Experience

Under the 1917 system these men would have the order of their going determined by a great lottery in the beginning. That is the true "draft" or "conscription." But if, after that classification, we use a method tried on a small scale in 1918, we could get all the supposed benefits of volunteering with all the virtues of selection.

We would not let the "order numbers" work to "take" men unless not enough men in Class 1A volunteered for training to fill the national quota. What I am about to say is partly a guess, but it is a guess based on experience. I feel sure that we would never have to take a single man against his will.

His government, his neighbors and friends would have determined for every man whether or not he should decide to go in the vanguard, not go at all, or go only when there were not enough others in the same classification who preferred to go earlier. No one would suffer the stigma of being either a conscript or a slacker.

If we must modify the selection service system, let's not do it on any political basis of waiting for the election or on any fumbling, fooling makeshift that impairs its principle. Let's do it this way.

War Worry Is Useless

From the Johnstown, Pa., Democrat

Work hard and play hard, but don't worry about the war situation any more than you can possibly help. That's eminently sane advice. Medical journals report a rise in the number of mental cases requiring treatment in the last two months. It may be due to too much despondent brooding about the war, especially among younger men and women.

This, of course, does nobody any good. One cannot shut eyes and ears to what is going on in the world. That would be unwise even if one could do it. But mere depression over things beyond the individual control does no good, either to the individual or in solving the problem.

Every generation and every time has had its problems and its tragedies. The only course is to do what must be done and do it with vigor and a clear head. Beyond that, people do well to work hard at their jobs, indulge in all customary recreation and play, and try as far as possible to avoid worry. Even if the worst happens, is it not bad enough to endure that without having gone through it in imagination a thousand times before?

Aggressive Campaign By GOP Assured

WITH possibly the most efficient national organization it has ever known the Republican party is preparing to wage an aggressive and thorough-going campaign in all parts of the nation to insure the election of its nominees for president and vice president of the United States.

Already the machinery has been set in motion for the building of a highly effective instrument to accomplish this purpose.

Aside from the already proved wide appeal of Wendell L. Willkie, the nominee for president, and the assurance that he will put forth a most vigorous contest for the presidency, his personal efforts will be ably seconded by his running mate, Senator Charles L. McNary, and by the full cooperation of every element within the party.

Seldom has any nominee aroused so great an enthusiasm as has Mr. Willkie among the party leaders or had pledges of a support so undivided.

With Representative Joseph W. Martin, Jr., Republican leader in the House of Representatives, as chairman of the Republican National Committee, and with John Hamilton, former national chairman, as his aide, the national committee will function with full effectiveness.

Its efforts will be supplemented by the highly representative campaign advisory committee, headed by Governor Harold E. Stassen, of Minnesota, temporary chairman and "keynoter" of the recent Republican national convention. The most complete cooperation between these two bodies is assured.

Nor can it be doubted that the rank and file members of the party, together with countless Democrats, disgusted with the New Deal, will rally behind the splendid leadership that has been provided.

Demand and Competition Grow Together

THE WORLD TEXTILE TREND is now definitely toward man-made fibers, according to William C. Appleton, president of the American Viscose Corporation, Wilmington, Del. This development, he adds, is sure to be accentuated further in the future.

Analyzing the first half of 1940, Appleton said that period had witnessed a great deal of work done on developing new fabrics and outlets for yarn and staple. He observed that the industry now appeared to be on the threshold of generally increased use of rayon in various fields, including flat knitting, automobile materials and certain industrial applications.

The pronounced preference for rayon and the other new textiles, Appleton noted, was indicated even in countries where there are ample supplies of natural fibers. He pointed out that the present inventory position of the rayon industry in this country was particularly good, though there had been a natural hesitancy due to the European crisis.

All this is to the good from the local viewpoint, considering that a big synthetic textile plant is situated here. But the fact that this report comes from the head of a large competing concern is a reminder that as the demand for the product grows, competition becomes all the keener. It is this competition, provided and stimulated by private initiative and private industry, which should be encouraged, that makes for steady volume production and that, in turn, brings the products within the reach of the masses.

Passive Campaigning For Army Recruits

ONE of the arguments advanced in behalf of national conscription is that recruiting has gone on for some time for the regular army and the national guard without bringing in the large number of men deemed desirable for the expansion sought in the plans for these forces. But that recruiting has never taken on a really serious campaigning stage. The possibilities of an energetic advertising campaign were never considered.

In this connection, it is of interest to note that governmental advertising, which has branched out in recent years from the field of routine legal notices to the promotion of the industrial or vacation advantages of states and cities, is now being used to stimulate the payment of taxes, according to the Municipal Finance Officers' Association of the United States and Canada.

The state of Michigan, Ingham county in Michigan, the city of Detroit and Greenburgh, N. Y., are among the governmental units reporting that advertising campaigns resulted in greatly increased tax collections. Newspapers, the radio and billboards were advertising mediums used in the campaigns.

Michigan's campaign began in 1935, when $75,000 was appropriated by the state legislature for a four-month program to educate taxpayers concerning a ten-year installment-payment plan for delinquent taxes. As a result of the campaign, more than $15,000,000 in cash was collected, and taxes representing $60,0000,000 were placed on the ten-year plan.

In 1936 Michigan appropriated $15,000 to urge through advertisements the payment of the second installment under the ten-year plan, while in 1937 an appropriation of $25,000 was spent in calling attention to installment payments due, and to inform taxpayers of minor changes in the act allowing installment payments.

Ingham county spent $5,000 several years ago in a special campaign to collect $3,000,000 in delinquent taxes. During the campaign, more than $2,000,000 was either collected in cash or placed on the ten-year plan. Detroit has conducted similar tax collection campaigns.

Greenburgh used 4,500 lines of display advertising in local newspapers in March to stimulate tax collections, and reported to the association that for April the collections amounted to seventy-four per cent of the levy compared with sixty-nine per cent in April of 1939.

There are those who believe, in the light of such proved results, of which the tax collection campaign are only one of many, that recruiting of volunteers has never had a real chance and that, if it were gone about in a more vigorous manner, based upon the wealth of experience with other properly conducted advertising campaigns, the results would be far more satisfactory.

Wild Driving as A Social Error

EMILY POST, who is commonly associated with such questions as which is the right tool for tackling artichokes, and whether the free throw is legal when eating salted nuts, has issued a set of six rules for motorists, appearing in This Week. At first blush, Em might be thought to be out of her orbit, and yet, on second thought, it seems entirely proper that she concern herself with driving manners.

Manners have everything to do with safety on the streets. Miss Post's list of Don'ts includes, hogging the road; parking so that cars before and behind can not maneuver easily; presuming on the chivalry of men, if one is a woman driver; leaving bright lights on to blind the oncoming driver; paging the girl friend with a horn from the curb, and drinking before driving. Nothing new—but having the new authority of the Post imprimatur.

Many an evil—like drink—is better controlled by the force of accepted custom than of statutes. If Em can get it across that wild driving and the like are social errors as well as violations of the law, she will have rendered a great public service. It is strange that she and her recognized power for good have not been enlisted in this field before now.

Dr. Goebbels's ministry of Propaganda and Enlightenment certainly has a tough problem to solve trying to censor those British bombing raids so the German people won't know about them!

"Absence makes the heart grow fonder," wrote the poet. But, then, he never received a postcard in August from a vacationing friend bearing the news "we have to use blankets every night."

A Mr. H. G. Shaffer of Pierce City, Mo., says he has invented a parachute that cannot go wrong no matter what happens. Just a fairly reliable parachute is a terrible thing.

An Italian "token" army is to accompany the Nazi blitzkriegers against England. This is the first time in history that invading troops were accompanied by hitch-hikers.

For ages men accepted plausible theories and did no thinking. Then science said: "Here's the right theory." So they accepted it and felt educated and again quit thinking.

In eighteen months, the cost of Minnesota's state government drops $10,000,000 under the Boy Governor, Stassen. This can only be ascribed to his inexperience.

Judging by reports from that country, Rumania is pro-Red on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Sundays. And pro-Nazi on alternate days.

Of course, Doc Einstein becomes an American because he likes democracy. Democracy, by the way, is our theory, and we think well of it.

The United States now has 2,655 airports, statistics show. It no longer is a hop between them—just a bounce.

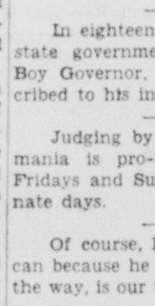

"At the present state of the world," advises a commentator, "anything may happen to anybody at any time." May your eye! It does.

Led by the Nose

By MARSHALL MASLIN

The wise men of the science of psychology say that the memory is most easily led by the nose . . . and everybody knows that.

If you follow your nose it leads you back into the past. It is no forward looking organ, has no creative imagination, cannot foretell future smells, future perfumes. . . . For example:

Marshall Maslin

A pear orchard in bloom: Reminds you of days in the country when you were a child. Reminds certain gentlemen of middle age, who fought in that other war, of a deadly gas that smelled like the faint perfume of pear blossoms.

* * *

Passing a bakery in the early morning hours: Reminds this writer of long ago when he rose before dark to peddle newspapers and the first kid to snatch a paper off the press pedaled like the dickens down to McGrath's bakery to trade it for half a dozen warm doughnuts.

* * *

Burning horse hoofs: The village blacksmith shop. Dark except for the glow of metal in the forge. The blacksmith with the leather apron, the sturdy horses, being allowed to pump the bellows and the curling smoke and the unforgetable odor as the hot shoe was set on the horse's hoof.

* * *

A wet doggy smell: Washing your reluctant dog. Or going swimming with the dog and having him plunge in first and come out grinning all over and shake himself all over us. "Get out, Rover!"

* * *

A sweet wet smell: The earth after a soaking rain. Tramping the fields and orchards in the autumn. A crisp apple dug out from under the leaves. Golden pumpkins rich against the brown background of the earth.

* * *

The sour smell of the vinegar works, the warm smell of the barn with Bossie chewing her cud and the pigeons tur-rucky-ta-kooing in the loft overhead, that antiseptic smell of hospital operating rooms, the ozone in the air after lightning flashes, coffee warehouses, breweries, busy docks and plowed fields. . . . Terror, pain, joy, uplift, depression, calm reminiscence—to all these the memory is led, by the nose.

America's Oldest Ghost, a Dwarf, Is Seen Again

Edwin C. Hill

Do you believe in ghosts? Down in Beaufort, South Carolina, folks are saying that the oldest white ghost in America has been seen again. It is the ghost of the dwarf, La Chere, who sailed over from France in Jean Ribaut's square-rigger. It's a curious fact, as Marion Lowndes says in Harper's Bazaar, that, if ghosts are hallucinations, it's always the same ghost that reappears in different generations to different people.

Since the fourth Mary died on the gallows tree, as the sad old ballad reports, a cuddling child has been creeping in and out of the dark, tartan-hung beds of Glamis. The White Lady of the Hohenzollerns is a famous family ghost who appeared through four centuries, like pride before a fall, to the fierce-eyed kings and emperors of Germany. Whenever a Duke of Argyll dies, there are always some who look for a gallery with its crew of three to come sailing up Loch Fyne, that Campbell galley that's pictured in the family arms. In Denmark, Abel the Fratricide is still seen now and then walking in the woods of Poole near Schleswig.

In 1914 there was the remarkable instance of the Angels of Mons, when many men thought they saw the same thing—phantom troops, the ghosts of men slain at Agincourt. Arrows seemed to fly from their long bows and some heard the whizz of arrows and battle cries.

Absorbed Vibrations

Some people explain ghosts by saying that the walls of old houses absorb the vibrations of certain lives and give them back again from time to time when there's a receptive consciousness about. According to this story, the vibrations are an echo of strange characters of the intense feeling which once "charged" the spot. Just the way another person exposed to the vibrations of a blow on the head might see stars. There aren't any stars and, according to this argument, there's aren't any ghosts—only vibrations and effects.

Others lay their ghosts with theories about glands. Excessive thyroid activity, they say, results in visions. As far as that goes, you can be perfectly healthy and stimulate your mind's eye to a "dim" inward sight, simply by thinking hard of a friend's face. Drugs will produce the same effect; or delirium or excess of alcohol. In all these events the nerves of sight are stimulated not by light waves but by thought waves or by chemicals, and a distinct impression results.

The eyes of fever see a skeleton shaking its bones to the "Hominy Hop." The eyes of opium see cool cascades swinging through the back rooms of a wretched little Chinese tailor's shop. The eyes of grief—or, if you prefer, excess adrenalin—saw Hamlet's father walking on the ramparts of Elsinore.

Margot's Quip

The chances are that it will be a long time before ghosts are explained to everyone's satisfaction. One recalls the celebrated quip of Margot Asquith when asked if she believed in ghosts. "Certainly not," was her tart reply. "Their appearance is against them." Meanwhile, however, people will continue to see ghosts, as they have always done in all ages and in all countries.

It was Thackeray, a great believer, who remarked, "It's all very well for you who have never seen a ghost, to talk as you do, but had you seen what I have seen, what I have witnessed, you would hold a different opinion."

Among several classic and fascinating stories, Harper's Bazaar recalls the one about the little old lady with the long nose in Wiscasset, Maine. Under the shingled roofs of the house where she is still seen, she raised a family of six sons. Through the bitter winters and unadventerous summers, she kept house ably and grimly for her husband and the boys. She had no feeling for any diversions that might have eased her lot, but she did have endurance. Her youngest son was lost at sea off India; the next one died at home. Before the Civil war had lasted a year another son's horse with stirrups reversed was following his master's coffin to the graveyard.

Had Endurance

But she had endurance, and she went on counting her white thin silver spoons and scrubbing her white paneled rooms and keeping herself to herself. Another son died of drink, and another became a kind of recluse, and the last one had pneumonia. Her husband, once able and full of authority, ended his days as a fretful invalid in a wing chair.

The old lady looked round her beautiful, lifeless rooms, at her carved cornices and her elegant mahoganies, and her gold wallpaper shining in the lamplight. Outside she heard the yellow elm branches lashing in the wind and she felt how the storm spent itself against the long, jointed clapboards of the pilastered facade of her beloved house.

"Everything has failed me," she said when she was dying, "except this house. If I can, I'll come back."

* * *

A Strange House

Her house is there still, very much as she left it, but there is something strange about it. For one thing, no one ever feels entirely alone in it. It also happens that a roomful of people will fall silent simultaneously. If there are dogs around they whine and the fur rises on their back. Presumably steps are heard, presently, coming slowly down the stairs.

One summer day, two sisters were sitting on the terrace in the back of the house.

"Who on earth it that?" said the other.

"No one's there."

"Oh, yes, there is," the first insisted. "Or there was. Didn't you see her looking out of that window? A face with a long nose, and a little white cap on her head?"

No one was in the house when they looked, but the same visitor was seen by a tenant several years later. She thought it was a caller and hurried into the parlor only to find that the little long-nosed woman in the rocking chair had disappeared before her eyes.—Copyright, 1940, King Features Syndicate, Inc.

AND SOME ONE ELSE HAS A MYSTERIOUS SECRET

Disaffection in the South Prompts Unique Work There by New Dealers

By CHARLES P. STEWART
Central Press Columnist

For the first time since Civil war days Democratic party leaders are discussing plans for a vigorous campaign to hold the Solid South in the coming presidential election.

Joseph Martin

Heretofore they've reckoned that the southern states didn't need much attention; that they were bound to go Democratic, anyway. Now, however, they're getting reports of considerable southern grumbling over the Roosevelt-Wallace ticket. It also is well known that Republican Chairman Joseph Martin is going to make a hard fight throughout Dixie for Willkie and McNary. In the past, the Republicans, like the Democrats, have paid little attention to that part of the country; not because they didn't wish they could win it over, but because they didn't believe they could possibly do so.

Southern Republicans' votes have been prized at G. O. P. conventions, inasmuch as they were useful in swinging nominations, but it wasn't considered that there were enough of them to be worth trying for in November.

This time, though, with Chairman Martin as Republicanly hopeful as he evidently is, and with their own local observers in the southland hinting at a certain amount of uneasiness, New Deal strategists are tending to the view that southern voters need some intensive cultivation.

Southern Statesmanship

Southern statesmanship, as distinguished from the rank-and-file of the electorate, isn't expected, even by the Willkieites, to do much out-and-out bolting from the Democratic nominees.

It's largely disgruntled, but it can't abandon the Democratic party in favor of any other party that suits it any better.

Apparently, like Senator (Cotton Ed) Smith, it simply will resort to 'passive resistance," a sit-down strike. It will stay on the premises but it won't do a lick for the Democratic ticket. That is to say, to a considerable extent it won't.

Just how they'll go about it isn't quite apparent yet.

For one thing, their national committee is scarcely functioning, with Chairman Farley just quitting. They doubtless trust in providence, too, that the southern atmosphere presently will improve, from their standpoint.

Yet they generally agree that this isn't a year in which the south can safely be neglected.

Republican Claims

The Willkieites probably claim too much, as to Dixie.

To hear their spokesman talk about it, one would guess that they'll clean up everything below the Mason-Dixon line. They themselves undoubtedly don't really anticipate all that.

Herbert Hoover actually did carry four southern states in 1929, but to defeat Al Smith in that year, he didn't have to have them.

If Willkie can do that well, he and Joe Martin unquestionably will be well satisfied. They'll depend on that showing, plus what they're counting on in the north to put Wendell and Charley McNary over.

I believe they truly are optimistic as to Texas, where they're convinced the voters are deeply resentful of the fate of Vice President (Cactus Jack) Garner. It's understandable that they maye be.

Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina also are conspicuously mentioned (by Republicans) as G. O. P. possibilities. They have no outstanding citizens of their own who were as ostentatiously slaughtered as the Chicago convention as Garner was. Nevertheless, the Republicans have hopes of them.

At all events, Willkie clubs are being organized all over Dixie. The G. O. P. at least considers Dixie worth fighting for, for the first time in two or three generations.

An the Democrats consider it doubtful enough to be worth figthing for.

From the Johnstown, Pa., Tribune

The most plainspoken among those who oppose New Deal aspirations for a third term are Democrats of the Jefferson and Jacksonian variety who have always prided themselves on their party regularity. They are not going to be regular this year, and they don't mince words in saying so.

Former Gov. John J. Cornwell of West Virginia, who is a part owner of the Hampshire Review, a newspaper published at Romney, W. Va., was a delegate-at-large to the recent Democratic national convention in Chicago. What he saw and heard there didn't please him a bit, and he is going to display his displeasure in a practical way. He is going to oppose the re-election of President Roosevelt.

The following comment on the convention appeared in his paper and may be assumed to represent his views:

"The pretense that President Roosevelt was drafted for a third term is so hollow, thin and transparent as to be silly. It was planned, directed and accomplished by federal office holders with the president's aid and under direction, climaxed and rounded out by political machine heads, such 'humanitarians' as Frank Hague of Jersey City and Mayor Kelly of Chicago . . .

"When the President had been 'drafted,' he in turn 'drafted' a Republican member of his Cabinet for Vice President and shoved him down the throat of the convention . . .

"That was the convention and there is the ticket. A Democrat who has been accustomed to holding his nose at times when voting his ticket; who upon occasion voted it because, while not satisfactory, it was better than the opposition, would now feel less disturbed if this thing has been done openly, honestly and frankly.

"To couple it all with an air of sacrifice and sanctity; of innocence and of ignorance as the president sought to do in his acceptance speech, taxes one's patience and leads us to wonder what is to become of a country whose head indulges in such deceptions."

If the third-term business is discussed any more realistically than in the above, it probably will be by some other disillusioned Democrat whose faith in President Roosevelt and the New Deal has been shattered and whose pen drips a stronger mixture of vitriol and T. N. T than that of his West Virginia compatriot.

Johnson Decries Political Catch In Draft Act

By HUGH S. JOHNSON

CINCINNATI, Aug. 5—When I left Washington Saturday the dope was that the selective service bill would pass with a neat little safety catch—there are to be no actual selections until after election to "give the volunteer system" a chance to work.

Hugh Johnson

This is pretty awful. If it were only a question of filling up the regular army, the recruiting stations, aided by a ballyhoo drive, could doubtless do it. But the job is much greater than that. It is to induct into military service and train several hundred thousand men as soon as they can be equipped and accommodated.

The idea of selection—as distinguished from volunteering — is not merely to get men. Hank Stevens' eyes shifted about the courtroom. Sure, he was the defendant in this murder trial. 'Twarn't nothing. He rubbed a gnarled hand across his red stubble beard and let his hard mouth give way to a twisted smile. Sure, he had killed George Stark. But they couldn't prove it. Hank guessed he knowed a thing or two.

He was inwardly amused at the fiery, scornful glances of the townfolk seated on the benches outside the bar. He warn't surprised that they suspected him. It made it all the better. Gave him a good alibi. Sure, George had almost caught him cheating at cards and in the fight that follwed had almost killed him with two bare fists. Hank could still feel that last sock on the chin. Sure, he had picked his own bleeding self offen the floor in Burke's bar to shout, "I'll get you for this, George Stark."

But that had been more'n four years ago. True, he and George hadn't been overfriendly, but they'd nodded, and at times, even talked together. This was his alibi. Townfolk called as witnesses would testify to this. Their word was better than his own.

Those folks out there knew that Zeb Jordan's drugstore had been robbed. They didn't knowed who'd done it. But George, he knowed who'd done it. And that's why he couldn't be left around to tell tales. George had been out delivering his milk and had caught him just as he was closing the drugstore door.

Hank was glad he went to George's place that morning. George had signed his own death warrant with the words: "If you don't give yourself up, I just got to tell the sheriff."

So he'd let him have it—and they couldn't find the gun. Hank was kind of glad he'd gone straight to the sheriff and spun a yarn as to how George had been murdered. He wished they'd get this courtroom stuff over with.

As the proceedings began he breathed a sigh of relief. Lucky, after he'd shot George he'd taken the cocoa that was on the stove, poured it into the two cups that had been set out and sloshed it out again, leaving the cups looking just as if they had been used.

He'd outsmarted most of these people all his life. He'd outsmart them now.

Then, at last his name was called. He ambled up to the witness stand and looked about the courtroom calmly. He repeated to himself what he was going to say. They would have to set him free.

The county prosecutor cleared his throat.

"Hank, you up to George's day he was murdered?"

"Sure was."

"What were you doing there the morning he was killed?"

Hank sighed a breath of relief. This was the queston he was hoping for.

"George asked me up for cocoa."

"That was his way of showing his freindship and hospitality. I guess most of the town has been up there for cocoa. I have — often." The prosecutor scratched at the back of his head. "Did you sit down and drink this cocoa with George, Hank?"

"Sure did."

"You drink it fast?"

Hank shook his head and smiled. He would stick to his story.

"Nope. We drank it in sips. Jawin' in between. Kinda slow and easy like. Way folks allus does."

The prosecutor smiled, walked over to the clerk of court and held up a labeled can.

"Yup. George's cocoa tin."

The prosecutor addressed the judge.

"May it please the court, I would like the matron to make a cup of cocoa from this tin."

The judge pursed his lips and nodded.

Hank's heart beat a little faster. This was some trick. He'd have to be careful. The hushed quiet of the courtroom disturbed his calm.

There was no solace in the prosecutor's satisfied smile. At last the matron appeared, bearing the steaming cups of cocoa. The prosecutor rested it on the clerk of court's desk, took a sip, and faced the defendant.

"Now, Hank, how come George was shot?"

"We were sittin' there, me on one side of the table, George on the other with his head right at the open window. Heard a shot from the hills like—and right off George's head slumped on his chest."

The prosecutor took another sip. "You any idea who might have fired this shot?"

"Dunno. Might a been someone a-huntin' in the woods shottin'at something else. Sure scared me stiff." He watched the prosecutor take another sip. "I knew right off I'd be suspected. That's why I went straight to the sheriff."

"Now Hank, you know you're under oath?"

"Yup."

"And have you told the truth?"

"I ain't told nothing else but——"

"About that cocoa. How'd you say you drank it?"

"In sips—slow and easy like. Just like you drank that."

The prosecuter took a last sip, and, picking up the cup, he approached the defendant slowly — and snapped: "You're lying! You've lied from the first word. Sipped cocoa leaves a series of sediment rings around the cup. One ring formed by the new level of the cocoa after each sip. Just like this!"

He shoved the cup up under the defendant's eyes. Hank stared wildly. The prosecutor beckoned to the clerk of court, who brought one of the state's exhibits over to the witness stand.

"While the cups we found in George's place look like this——"

Hank stared blankly.—Distributed by United Features Syndicate.

THE DAILY STORY

THE EMPTY CUP

The Story of a First and Last Crime, with a Lesson on How To Drink a Cup of Cocoa

BY BARRY O'DAY

Hank Stevens' eyes shifted about the courtroom. Sure, he was the defendant in this murder trial. 'Twarn't nothing. He rubbed a gnarled hand across his red stubble beard and let his hard mouth give way to a twisted smile. Sure, he had killed George Stark. But they couldn't prove it. Hank guessed he knowed a thing or two.

He was inwardly amused at the fiery, scornful glances of the townfolk seated on the benches outside the bar. He warn't surprised that they suspected him. It made it all the better. Gave him a good alibi. Sure, George had almost caught him cheating at cards and in the fight that follwed had almost killed him with two bare fists. Hank

American designers are on their way—to spectacular success or quick oblivion.

With the Paris style industry out of working order, they are having their first crack at big time designing. This fall they'll be star performers in the only large-scale fashion openings anywhere in the world.

If their stuff goes over, they'll be all set. New York will be the world's fashion capital, and its designers will hold the spotlight that once shone only on Parisian couturiers.

If they fail to make a quick success, fashion leadership probably will revert to Paris within a year, regardless of politics. That's the realistic view of experts in the industry.

* * *

So far, all signs are hopeful. The whole country is rooting for American designers. To clinch success, they need two things—showmanship, and the cooperation of every branch of the fashion industry.

First, they must capture the public's imagination, until a gown by Nettie Rosenstein or Helen Cookman seems as glamorous as a Lanvin creation. They are getting plenty of help on this point. Big city stores are sponsoring individual designers, helping them to build up names. The World's Fair World of Fashion presents not only American designs, but also American designers, in person.

The fashion industry is doing its utmost to help. Textile houses which heretofore refused to make short lengths of materials, now offer to cooperate on experimental fabrics. Fashion leaders are enlarging the research facilities of the Museum of Costume Art for the convenience of designers.

But the big test is yet to come. Up to now, virtually all American designs have been based on the slim silhouette Paris launched last spring. This silhouette will serve through the fall season, but then what?

* * *

Then it will be up to American designers to launch new and original fashion trends. Can they do it? What if Jo Copeland decides to make skirts longer next spring, while Vera Maxwell decides to make them shorter? What if Hattie Carnegie decides to sponsor a high empire waistline, while Germain Monteil decides to lower waistlines an inch or two? Who will have the last word? How will a manufacturer know which trend to follow when he starts to make up thousands of inexpensive frocks that must be "this season's latest style"?

The weakness of American designers is that almost every one of them is tied up with some manufacturing house. This means that a given design is available only to the whole industry. Paris designs, on the other hand, had no strings attached. They were immediately available to the whole ready-to-wear industry.

The best brains in the business are working toward a solution of this difficulty. If they find it, America's fashion future should be assured.

Loyalty to Nation Should Extend to Rights of Youth

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX, Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage — Distributed by King Features Syndicate, Inc.

A few days ago my morning paper showed the picture of a radiant young bride in all her loveliness, looking up at a stalwart young man to whom she had just been married, and for whom she rejected a share of her father's wealth.

That her American-born sisters did not agree to the harsh provision of their father's will was shown by the fact that she was married in the home of one of them. When interviewed by the press, the sister said that the father's will would not be broken but the bride would be given substantial gifts from time to time.

A week never passes without some girl writing to this column concerning her family's refusal to let her marry the man of her choice because he is of different national origin. When the man in question is a creditable citizen, amply able to support a wife and his only crime happens to be that he's an American, I see red.

Hearts in Old World

Fathers, or maybe grandfathers, have come to this country and prospered. They've made enough money to enjoy the comforts, even the luxuries the United States affords. Yet their hearts remain in the Old World where they had nothing and were regarded as not much more than the worm with which the rich landowner went fishing.

In the old countries, these aliens were taxed, threatened, driven, subjected to persecutions and were generally conceded to be social ciphers.

Sometimes the prosperous alien becomes a citizen of this country; sometimes he never does. He may take out his first papers. In some states this intention to become a citizen enables him to vote, and frequently he votes as a politician, no more American than himself but from the same country, dictates.

Wheels within Wheels

We have these wheels within wheels all over these United States, seeking always to aid the homeland where conditions were intolerable. What's the matter with such people? Do they never stop to think what conditions would be like if they went back to the country from which they came?

Yet, insofar as is possible, they wish to impose these Old World conditions on children born in this democracy, this land of free thought, free speech, free press. Thousands of girls are sacrificed to such loveless marriages every year. They have written to me that their mothers have never learned to speak a word of English because their fathers objected.

It is with a feeling of pride that this column offers its congratulations to the American-born girl who rejected a considerable legacy to marry the man she loved. At the moment, we have our hands full with these Americans in name only. It's high time that we amended some of our laws which enable them to come here and prosper while they show no loyalty to the United States.

Wants Him To Swim and Dance

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 17 years old and going with a boy about the same age. I'm a reader of your column and like the advice you give others, so thought you might help me. I'm very fond of swimming and dancing, but my boy friend doesn't do either. How can I persuade him to learn? I want to keep on going with him, but since I like to swim and dance, I can't enjoy his company as much as if he did the things I like.

UNDECIDED.

It's too bad your boy friend won't learn how to swim and dance, because he's certainly missing a lot of fun. You might just tell him that if he doesn't want to learn these two things you'll have to go with some other boy, as they mean a great deal to you.

Swimming isn't hard to learn, and he can take lessons at the Y. M. C. A. or at a public swimming pool. He can learn to dance by taking a few lessons in any good dancing school.

CHAPTER THIRTY-FOUR

"COULDN'T we have the ceremony first, then talk to Miss Nevins?" Caroline asked, and Linda sensed the fear in the girl's voice. Not until the marriage vows were taken, and a slim band was on her finger, would Caroline feel unafraid.

"That would be a little inconvenient," the elderly clergyman said. "You see, we have prepared the chapel for the wedding. It is cool and beautiful in there."

The telephone was in the living room of the parsonage, so Terry took the call there while the others waited in the small, lace-curtained parlor.

Now and then his voice carried to them. Once they heard him say, "Mina, you're being foolish. I'm marrying Caroline. No, I'm not marrying you!" There was a pause, then he exploded, "You've given my engagement to you to the papers? You call them up and correct it!"

He hung up and the clergyman looked questioningly at the group.

No one said anything and the four of them, accompanied by the minister's wife, went across the churchyard to the chapel. It was cool and sweet inside. White flowers were massed in bowls at either side of the pulpit, and a few white candles gleamed.

"Dearly beloved, we are gathered together," the minister's deep and kindly tones began the words that he had said so many times.

Linda felt the tears in her eyes. She glanced up, beyond the bride and bridegroom, and saw that Robert was looking beyond, a quizzical expression on his face.

The ceremony went on . . . "Caroline Elizabeth Pickard, do you take this man to be your lawful wedded companion in life, in sickness and in health, in fortune and in adversity, and forsaking all others to cleave unto him and him only?"

Caroline's "I do" was low and triumphant just as Terry's was.

Then the ceremony had ended, the diamond circlet was sparkling on Caroline's slim finger, and the four of them were driving back to New York.

Robert said nothing of the beauty of the ceremony. If he had been moved by the cloistered sentiment of the moment, it did not show. Instead, when he spoke, his voice was worried:

"Linda, Mina had some reason for wanting to marry Terry, to keep him from Caroline. I know her well enough to understand that she hasn't gone off the deep end about him. Don't get me wrong. He's a better man than I am, but Mina isn't taking up with public relations counsels. She had a reason, deep seated, and I've a hunch it's tied up in all this murder business."

He said nothing of this to the bride and bridegroom. Caroline's bags already were in the car, so when the two who had stood up with them were deposited at their mutual door, the car winked a merry tail light and went cheerfully away.

"Hungry?" Robert asked. "We forgot that a wedding supper was in order."

Linda gasped. "Why, we did." But she knew that Terry had not wanted one. He was too upset by that strange message. Rob did not wish to prolong the evening, either, and she wanted to be alone. It wasn't good to have Rob around, not when he made her heart miss curious beats. She was glad that the evening had ended.

The apartment was lonely without Caroline. Linda had liked it at first. She had drawn the curtains against the dusk all winter and read by the fire, not wanting companionship, because Ronnie had not come back.

"Better stay out of it. This won't clear up a thing."

Tonight she was restless. She wished that Ronald would come down when he finished his recordings. She might even go to meet him. No, that wouldn't do. He might think she trailed him, and men wanted to feel as free as the air, the sea, or a summer wind.

She went to bed and slep fitfully. She was late for work, though, because the alarm did not go off. Today she wore the rose linen frock again, and the cart-wheel hat. She attended to several matters at her desk, sent the office boy out for orange juice and coffee, and didn't open the morning papers until he brought back the cartons of liquids.

There was news in the first editions. John Parrish had been formally charged with the murder of Clarabell Ackerman. The murder had taken place 15 minutes before the elevator operator had brought Mr. Parrish up to that floor, the coroner had verified.

"But that's a lie!" Linda said out loud. "I saw Mr. Parrish in the coffee shop! He was there when I went in."

There remained, though, the fact that the watchman had not taken Joe's elevator to the street. That was unimportant to Linda at the moment. Apparently she was the only witness who could account for Mr. Parrish's actions during the time when the murder was being performed. She had no thought other than notifying the district attorney. She would have done it at once if Ronald had not walked into the office.

"I was passing and dropped by to say good morning," he said.

He never before had done this. For a second she felt oddly touched. Here was her love, her romance, her life. Last night she had let Robert's few words sweep her away, but she was home again.

She asked Ronnie to sit down and then reached for the telephone, explaining what she must do. To her surprise, he shook his head. "I wouldn't, Linda."

"You wouldn't? But I'm the only witness he has—that is, unless the coffee shop people remember he was there, too."

"There's some evidence you can't supply. How did he get downstairs and why? Why didn't he take the elevator? Better stay out of it. This won't clear up a thing."

"But it will. It will prove where he was at the time of the murder."

"Coroners may make mistakes. Listen, Linda, if he needs you, if the other links which will acquit him aren't found and everything depends on this, then of course I'd want you to go to town for him. But until they are—don't you think we've had enough publicity?"

Linda stared at him, seeing him and yet not seeing him. So this was Ronnie, this blue-eyed young giant who was afraid of publicity because it might hurt his career. And suddenly she realized that the knowledge did not hurt as she had thought it would. Some place, during these weeks, she had mislaid her love for him.

But this could not be. Ronnie was her world, the pivot of her dreams, and he could not fail her. He couldn't, simply couldn't let her down!

She felt a trifle ill and pushed the telephone away with unsteady hands.

He was standing up now. "Linda, promise me you'll do nothing until absolutely necessary. If it's a question of just what you know saving the man, then of course you must speak up. But wait. Please, Linda, won't you wait?"

Her eyes were green, wide, amazed. But she nodded. "I'll wait until we can talk it over. But why, Ronnie, why?"

Robert said nothing of the beauty of the ceremony. If he had been moved by the cloistered sentiment of the moment, it did not show. Instead, when he spoke, his voice was worried:

"Linda, Mina had some reason for wanting to marry Terry, to keep him from Caroline. I know her well enough to understand that she hasn't gone off the deep end about him. Don't get me wrong. He's a better man than I am, but Mina isn't taking up with public relations counsels. She had a reason, deep seated, and I've a hunch it's tied up in all this murder business."

He said nothing of this to the bride and bridegroom. Caroline's bags already were in the car, so when the two who had stood up with them were deposited at their mutual door, the car winked a merry tail light and went cheerfully away.

"Hungry?" Robert asked. "We forgot that a wedding supper was in order."

Linda gasped. "Why, we did." But she knew that Terry had not wanted one. He was too upset by that strange message. Rob did not wish to prolong the evening, either, and she wanted to be alone. It wasn't good to have Rob around, not when he made her heart miss curious beats. She was glad that the evening had ended.

The apartment was lonely without Caroline. Linda had liked it at first. She had drawn the curtains against the dusk all winter and read by the fire, not wanting companionship, because Ronnie had not come back.

"Better stay out of it. This won't clear up a thing."

Tonight she was restless. She wished that Ronald would come down when he finished his recordings. She might even go to meet him. No, that wouldn't do. He might think she trailed him, and men wanted to feel as free as the air, the sea, or a summer wind.

She went to bed and slep fitfully. She was late for work, though, because the alarm did not go off. Today she wore the rose linen frock again, and the cart-wheel hat. She attended to several matters at her desk, sent the office boy out for orange juice and coffee, and didn't open the morning papers until he brought back the cartons of liquids.

There was news in the first editions. John Parrish had been formally charged with the murder of Clarabell Ackerman. The murder had taken place 15 minutes before the elevator operator had brought Mr. Parrish up to that floor, the coroner had verified.

"But that's a lie!" Linda said out loud. "I saw Mr. Parrish in the coffee shop! He was there when I went in."

There remained, though, the fact that the watchman had not taken Joe's elevator to the street. That was unimportant to Linda at the moment. Apparently she was the only witness who could account for Mr. Parrish's actions during the time when the murder was being performed. She had no thought other than notifying the district attorney. She would have done it at once if Ronald had not walked into the office.

"I was passing and dropped by to say good morning," he said.

He never before had done this. For a second she felt oddly touched. Here was her love, her romance, her life. Last night she had let Robert's few words sweep her away, but she was home again.

She asked Ronnie to sit down and then reached for the telephone, explaining what she must do. To her surprise, he shook his head. "I wouldn't, Linda."

"You wouldn't? But I'm the only witness he has—that is, unless the coffee shop people remember he was there, too."

"There's some evidence you can't supply. How did he get downstairs and why? Why didn't he take the elevator? Better stay out of it. This won't clear up a thing."

"But it will. It will prove where he was at the time of the murder."

"Coroners may make mistakes. Listen, Linda, if he needs you, if the other links which will acquit him aren't found and everything depends on this, then of course I'd want you to go to town for him. But until they are—don't you think we've had enough publicity?"

Linda stared at him, seeing him and yet not seeing him. So this was Ronnie, this blue-eyed young giant who was afraid of publicity because it might hurt his career. And suddenly she realized that the knowledge did not hurt as she had thought it would. Some place, during these weeks, she had mislaid her love for him.

But this could not be. Ronnie was her world, the pivot of her dreams, and he could not fail her. He couldn't, simply couldn't let her down!

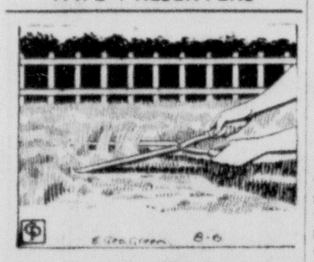

She felt a trifle ill and pushed the telephone away with unsteady hands.

He was standing up now. "Linda, promise me you'll do nothing until absolutely necessary. If it's a question of just what you know saving the man, then of course you must speak up. But wait. Please, Linda, won't you wait?"

Her eyes were green, wide, amazed. But she nodded. "I'll wait until we can talk it over. But why, Ronnie, why?"

Common Sense Remedies Are Often Best

Old-time Treatments Are Discussed by Dr. Logan Clendening

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

1. Treatment of nosebleed:

According to the reports, the old-fashioned treatment of nosebleed by the use of salt pork has been rehabilitated by Dr. A. J. Cone, of St. Louis. Plugs of salt pork put in the nose promptly stopped bleeding after other methods had failed. These are easier to introduce that the usual packing and certainly easier to remove. It has the property of preventing recurrence.

Nose bleed usually comes from exertion or from opening up a small ulcer in the nose due to scabs of dried mucous. It may herald the onset of infectious diseases such as measles or rhumatism. It may mean inadequacy of the liver or anemia or high blood pressure. It is by no means always a minor ailment, but may result in serious loss of blood.

2. Answers to first aid test questions:

Earlier in the week we asked a few questions designed to test the vacationists knowledge of first aid. The question as to what is the matter with a man whom you find in a stuffy room on a hot day with pale, clammy skin and shallow breathing in heat exhaustion. Proper treatment is to remove his clothes and dash cold water on his skin with some force.

The question, when a child comes to you rubbing his eye and says the wind blew something in it; will you tell him to rub towards the nose or away from it or rub the other eye?", should be answered: "don't let him rub his eyes at all; roll the lid back and brush it with a clean handkerchief."

Anniversaries and Birthdays Have Inestimable Values for Families

By GARRY CLEVELAND MYERS, Ph.D.

Wedding anniversaries and birthdays should be celebrated. They have inestimable family values.

Let me urge the young couples just married to remember each other's birthday and plan long ahead for celebrating the first and every subsequent wedding anniversary. The wedding anniversary should not merely be a gift for the wife but a trip together or party in which both husband and wife share the honors. With some parties there may well be small gifts by each to the other.

This celebration, like birthdays, need not be expensive. When the expenditure is excessive, one of the pair may have the joy of the occasion lessened because of worry over the cost. Anyway, it is the simple celebration which can afford greatest happiness, as a rule.

Birthdays Great Events

And when the first baby begins to have birthdays it is a great event for the parents who care to make it so. During the first and other early birthdays the celebration may have but little meaning to the child. The chief good is to his parents. It heightens his value to them.

Parents are tempted to put on elaborate birthday parties for the tot, even the child of eight or ten. If many other children are present the child in whose home the event is held may not only be over-excited but overwhelmed indeed. The shy ,timid child has a hard time at such a party. As a rule, the young guests should not number over four or five for the pre-school child.

Up to adolescence the birthday party is about the only one of a formal nature the child should have. For the timid, non-social young child formal parties do far more harm, as a rule, than good, since they cause this type of child to feel more inferior. Informal gatherings of a few children in the home, coming and going freely, boys and girls, have, typically, greatest social values. And the longer these boys and girls come and go without consciousness of sex the better.

Avoid Pairing Children

Wise mothers avoid pairing of young children at parties until the children reach their teens. Why so many will pair mere babies at parties is more than I can understand.

Let there be some games and good group fun planned for the birthday party, non-running games indoors; more active games out of doors or in a large play room. The mother owes it to her child, as well as to the guest children, not to let them remove and destroy furniture. Some parents, alas, must figure on buying some new furniture following a birthday party at their home.

The coroner said a note reading, "I do not want you to hurt my children," was found attached to the windshield wiper.

Mrs. Grant told him, Yanny stated, that she and her husband had quarreled following their visit to several taverns, and that he apparently drove home and got the two children after she got out of the automobile.

Rain of Silver Coins Puzzles Farmers

MOSCOW, Aug. 5 (AP)—Puzzled collective farmers learned today why it rained silver coins in the ancient little village of Meshcera, near Gorky, July 16.

The farmers gathered several of the oval-shaped silver pieces, about the size of a large fish scale, which poured on them during a violent thunderstorm.

Archeologists, to whom they brought the coins, identified them as late sixteenth century pieces and the theory was advanced that they were part of an undiscovered ancient treasure exposed by erosion and sent flying by the storm. One professor said other, heavier valuables and also utensils probably remained.

Search is expected to begin soon.

Announces Prices for Penna. Soft Coal

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—Pennsylvania soft coal producers would receive prices ranging from $1.39 to $2.75 a ton at the mines for fuel sold for shipment to their principal markets under minimum rates fixed by the Bituminous Coal Division.

The prices—at the mine mouth, exclusive of freight and handling charges—still are subject to appeals to Secretary of Interior Ickes before becoming effective September 3.

Both low and high marks in typical prices for Pennsylvania soft coal as announced by the coal division were on fuel mined in Western Pennsylvania fields.

The low of $1.39 was on three-quarter inch slack sold for shipment to Erie and other points in northwestern Pennsylvania. The highest figure, $2.75, was set for best grade six inch lump for the Cleveland, Akron, Youngstown and other eastern Ohio areas.

College Boys Eligible To Join the CCC

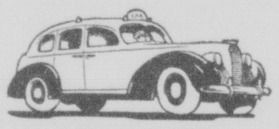

WASHINGTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—College boys as well as the sons of families on relief may now join the Civilian Conservation Corps.

"Young men attending college whose families are in the moderate income group now are eligible for enrollment in the CCC," he said.

Officials said the idea was to transform CCC "from a relief agency into a true service organization, capable of supplying the needs of this country in matters of national defense and industrial rehabilitation."

Somerset County Fair To Feature Racing Once More

Sport of Kings Back on Program at Meyersdale August 20-23

MEYERSDALE, Pa., Aug. 5.—The free admission feature instituted at the Somerset County Fair last year proved such a splendid success in boosting the attendance that the association has decided to have a "free gate" again this year at the meet to be held on the Meyersdale fair grounds August 20-23.

The several committees have nearly completed arrangements for the fair and races. For some years there was no horse racing, and the stables were torn down. Carpenters are engaged in erecting new stables, and the track is being placed in shape for the running races, of which there will be at least three daily, and perhaps four.

A fine midway has been provided and there promises to be an outstanding display of farm, garden and household products, which will be under the sponsorship of the several granges throughout the county. An added feature will be the 1940 annual flower show, sponsored by the Meyersdale Flower Club, which will be held in the Swank exhibition hall during the four days of the fair.

There will be street parades daily, the kiddies pet and bicycle parade, the merchants-industrial parade, the farmers' parade, and the firemen's parade on Friday, the closing day of the fair.

Close Clan Reunion

Hundreds of residents of Meyersdale and southern Somerset county points yesterday attended the band concert by the Meyersdale Community Band, under the direction of Nat LaCavera, and the additional fine program of entertainment at Meadow Mountain, on the National pike, in connection with the reunion of the Close clan.

Somerset County Fair To Feature Racing Once More

A fine midway has been provided and there promises to be an outstanding display of farm, garden and household products, which will be under the sponsorship of the several granges throughout the county. An added feature will be the 1940 annual flower show, sponsored by the Meyersdale Flower Club, which will be held in the Swank exhibition hall during the four days of the fair.

There will be street parades daily, the kiddies pet and bicycle parade, the merchants-industrial parade, the farmers' parade, and the firemen's parade on Friday, the closing day of the fair.

Firemen's Carnival

The greatest celebration in the history of Moorefield opens today with the first showing of the Great Bright Way Shows at the ball park. The week of shows and events, sponsored by the Moorefield Volunteer Fire Company, will close Sunday night. The Bright Way Shows have a one ring circus, riding devices, musical shows, side shows and freak shows employing more than one-hundred performers.

Thursday, the A 1 X Ranch Rodeo opens with their Wild West Rodeo at the same place. Perforances will be given nightly with matinee Saturday and Sunday. More than one hundred head of stock, all trained for rodeo purposes, are included in the spectacle.

Friday night will be Firemen's night, and a parade is scheduled at seven in the evening featuring fire trucks and equipment and the dress drill teams of all nearby fire companies.

Never before has a celebration in Moorefield featured two major attractions nor has any celebration lasted for an entire week.

Tar Fire Threatens

The portable furnace used by the town in repairing streets and alleys caught fire Thursday afternoon when the tar boiled over and ran into the firebox under the vehicle. The blazing tar ran all over the street endangering several houses on Franklin street.

The Moorefield Volunteer Fire Company, using for the first time the new fog nozzle, extinguished the blaze in short order. Firemen worked several hours on their hose after returning to the firehouse as the sticky tar got on the fabric of several sections.

Flying Course Starts

Dudley Reed, manager of the Elkins airport and instructor at Davis and Elkins college under the Civil Aeronautics Authority training program, started his flying course at Moorefield Friday. Eight Moorefield business men took their first lesson, and the class will increase to twelve next week.

Reed will instruct the embryo fliers each Thursday.

A new flying field will be used as the present flying field is not available for the course of instruction. George T. Williams, prominent farmer and banker of the South Branch Valley, permitted the use of his field just east of Moorefield up the South Fork for the flying course.

Reed will bring his ten passenger Stinson plane to Moorefield Saturday August 17 for the observance of National Aviation Day, when Congressman Jennings Randolph and Blanche Noyes will make addresses at 1:30 p. m.

Annual Broadwater Clan Reunion Draws Crowd Estimated at 4,000

GRANTSVILLE, Aug. 5 — A crowd estimated at approximately 4,000 attended the tenth annual reunion of the descendants of Cornelius Broadwater, their families and friends, at New Colonial Inn, on Long Stretch yesterday. This is probably the largest gathering of its kind in this section.

The president, Ellis E. Broadwater, Cumberland, who was in charge of the arrangements, provided a varied and entertaining program. In addition to group singing, there were selections by the Senior choir of the First Congregational church at Frostburg; a quartet and trio from the Cresaptown Methodist church; and duets by Fanny Stein and Richard Lohr, Cresaptown, accompanied by Miss Grace Davis. They also sang a special number, "The Unseen City", in memory of those members of the clan who had passed on.

Readings were given by Miss Betty May, Cumberland, and an "unknown clown", and last, but not least, Mrs. Harriett Blocher, 95, who recited a poem of her own composition, "The Unseen Hand". It was interesting to note, and rather unusual, that five generations of Mrs. Blocher's family were represented at this gathering. With Mrs. Blocher was her daughter, Mrs. Sally Bowers, and Mrs. Bower's daughter, Mrs. Silas Durst, Jennings; Mrs. Durst's daughter, Mrs. Neal Morris, with her son, Richard, Ohiopyle.

The Rev. J. F. Zimmerman, Cumberland, offered the opening and closing prayers and also made the principal address, giving a short history of the Broadwater family and discussing home and family life in general. Brief remarks were also made by Edward Lewis, assistant pastor of First Methodist church at Cresaptown, and the Rev. J. C. Beahm, pastor of the Maple Grove Church of the Brethren.

A letter of greeting from Charles L. Broadwater, ElSegundo, Calif., was read by W. J. Daniels, Cumberland, who recounted a brief history of the Charles L. Broadwater family. Mr. Broadwater is the father of Charles A. Broadwater, who was born in West Virginia, later moving to Missouri, and was instrumental in developing the western states.

According to custom, several prizes were distributed. Mr. and Mrs. Howard Metz, with their fifteen children, received the award for the largest family present, while honors for the oldest person attending was presented to Mrs. Harriett Blocher. The prize for the family coming the greatest distance went to Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Broadwater, Harmony, Minn., who traveled approximately 1000 miles in order to attend. The two-weeks-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Resh was the youngest person present.

During the short business session, the same officers were re-elected, namely, Clarence L. Broadwater, Cumberland, honorary president; Ellis E. Broadwater, Cumberland, president; Miss Ethel Broadwater, Grantsville, secretary and treasurer, and Earl Broadwater, Grantsville, social director. The first Sunday in August was set as the date for the reunion next year, which will be held at the same place.

In addition to numerous persons from nearby communities, among those relatives coming from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Broadwater, Harmony, Minn.; Mr. and Mrs. Olin C. Broadwater, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Bittinger, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bittinger, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hunter, Akron, O.; Dr. and Mrs. G. V. Broadwater and son, Russell, Middleburg; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Kight and daughter, Natalie, Mrs. Florence Walker, Ridgeley, W. Va.; Mrs. J. C. Shaw, Cleveland, O.; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Broadwater, Brownsville, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Taylor, Washington.

Frostburg Council Postpones Action On Auditing Bids

Audit for Past 18 Years Out of Question, Commissioners Told

FROSTBURG, Aug. 5—After discussing at considerable length three bids tonight for auditing the city's books, the mayor and city commissioners decided to hold a special meeting at a later date for the purpose of determining the number of years for which to ask for other competitive bids.

The bids submitted tonight were as follows: William Scott, Cumberland, former county auditor, $2 per hour or $12 for a six-hour day, until the audit is completed; Charles O. Hall, Baltimore, $500 for the past two fiscal years; and Harlan Johnson, Davis and Osborne, Baltimore, $500 for the past fiscal year.

No Audit for 18 Years

Phillip M. Osborne, representing his firm, stated that the cost of auditing the books for the past eighteen years, when the last audit is reported to have been made, would probably exceed an amount that the town could afford to pay.

He suggested an audit for the past year or two, which he said would result in disclosing methods by which the city's bookkeeping system could be improved and simplify the matter of an anpual audit in the future.

Commissioner William Lemmert, who introduced the resolution to have the audit made several weeks ago, offered a motion tonight to award the contract to Charles O. Hall to audit the books for two years at a cost of $500.

His motion failed for want of a second.

Matter Tabled

Council then decided, on motion of Commissioner Walter Powell, to give the matter further consideration.

During the discussion, Mayor Olin Gunnett stated that he resented the sensational" stories recently published concerning the city council, with particular reference to the proposed audit of the city's books.

He was presumably referring to articles appearing in a Cumberland weekly.

John Conrad, who was serving as special police officer for a few days during the absence of Chief Benjamin H. Thomas, appeared before council and questioned the right of the city to appoint an additional police officer without a competitive examination.

'Temporary' Appointment

Conrad referred not to his own appointment, but to the appointment of extra police following the installation of parking meters. He said his understanding was that qualified citizens out of work were to be given an opportunity to share the work on the police force.

Police Commissioner Walter Powell informed him that the special policeman, George Tipping, who has been on the force since the meters were installed in May, 1939, was a "temporary" appointment. Conrad replied that if council decided to place an additional officer on the force, he would like to make application for the post in the regular manner prescribed by the city charter.

Conrad was assured by the police commissioner that applications would be considered from anyone wishing to compete for the job when council decides to make the appointment permanent.

Water Question Up Again

An agreement between the city and the Frostburg Water Company submitted tonight providing for the sale of city water at $.40 per thousand gallons was ordered returned to the Frostburg Water Company for the purpose of having a clause inserted giving the city the right to raise the rate if it proves unprofitable to the city and also providing that the Frostburg Water Company be required to pay the expenses of connecting and disconnecting the water from time to time.

An ordinance was passed prohibiting the sale and discharge of fireworks in the city limits and one mile beyond, the one exception being that public display of fireworks will be permitted by a written permit from the police commissioner. The ordinance will become effective September 4.

Counsel for W. Va. Communist Head And Judge Clash in Wheeler Trial

BECKLEY, W. Va., Aug. 5 (AP)—A defense charge that "pressure was brought to bear" on persons who made affidavit they were misled into signing a Communist nominating petition was placed before a jury today at the fraud trial of Oscar O. Wheeler, Communist candidate for governor.

Harold W. Houston, defense attorney whose clash with Criminal Court Judge Harley M. Kilgore brought a promise of "summary action" for a repetition, said:

Doubts Misrepresentation

"I do not think the state can present one witness who can truthfully say the peetition was misrepresented."

He referred to a petition filed May 13 to place the Communist party on the West Virginia ballot in 1940. The petition is under attack by the American Legion but a scheduled injunction suit was postponed in Charleston today because of Wheeler's trial.

Houston contended that witnesses were intimidated into repudiating their signatures on the petition which bore a total of 8,684 names. The Communist party in 1932, the last time it was on the ballot, polled 444 votes for President.

Prosecutor W. A. Thornhill Jr. began to call his witnesses after Houston's opening statement. The state is attempting to prove that when Wheeler was collecting signatures he misrepresented his purpose and held the petition folded back so prospective signers could not read it.

Six Deputies On Hand

Wheeler, fifty-three-year-old goat farmer whose home is in the hills beyond Beckley, sat with his wife, also under indisctment, in a crowded court room where Sheriff H. G. Farmer posted six deputies to watch for any disturbances.

Other testimony presented by Thornhill apparently was directed at proving Wheeler attempted to escape after indictment.

Houston, who with Louis Fleischer of New York and Frank C. Burdette of Charleston form Wheeler's defense counsel, was reprimanded by Judge Kilgore after he persisted in asking Alexander Davis, negro porter, whether Davis had asked any election official or attorney if it was illegal to vote in a primary after signing a nomination petition.

After the first reprimand, Houston retorted:

"Well, if I haven't the privileges of a member of the bar, I won't ask any more questions."

'Summary Action' Threatened

Judge Kilgore replied:

"I don't like your attitude. I don't like the remark. And if there is any repetition, I will use summary action."

Houston immediately dropped cross-examination and left the courtroom.

West Virginians Now Get Married at Home

BECKLEY, W. Va., Aug. 5 (AP)—Abrupt rise in the number of marriage licenses issued in Raleigh county was reported by officials who attributed the increase partly to the Virginia pre-parital blood test law which became effective Thursday.

The Virginia law is similar to that effective in West Virginia since June, 1939. Officials explained that many persons prior to August 1 this year had gone to Virginia for their ceremonies.

2 Men Convicted Of Driving Drunk By Keyser Court

One Appeals Verdict; Third Driver Awaits Hearing Wednesday

KEYSER, W. Va., Aug. 5—One of two men found guilty in Police court here today on charges of drunken driving appealed the decision of Judge A. A. Jordan, which calls for a uniform $50 fine and six months suspension of license.

Paul Mellon, 34, also of Keyser, arrested a short time before Eagle was taken into custody, was found guilty by Judge Jordan. Mellon was in the Mineral county jail here this evening, but friends were said to be negotiating for funds for either an appeal or for payment of the fine.

City Police Chief James E. Leatherman and Constable William Adams made both arrests.

A third man arrested at about the same time on a similar charge was released yesterday when he posted $150 bond. Judge Jordan said the trial of Alvin Moore, 41, has been set for Wednesday. Moore was arrested by Leatherman and Adams and Constable L. O. Kesner.

Annual Broadwater Clan Reunion Draws Crowd Estimated at 4,000

GRANTSVILLE, Aug. 5 — A crowd estimated at approximately 4,000 attended the tenth annual reunion of the descendants of Cornelius Broadwater, their families and friends, at New Colonial Inn, on Long Stretch yesterday. This is probably the largest gathering of its kind in this section.

The president, Ellis E. Broadwater, Cumberland, who was in charge of the arrangements, provided a varied and entertaining program. In addition to group singing, there were selections by the Senior choir of the First Congregational church at Frostburg; a quartet and trio from the Cresaptown Methodist church; and duets by Fanny Stein and Richard Lohr, Cresaptown, accompanied by Miss Grace Davis. They also sang a special number, "The Unseen City", in memory of those members of the clan who had passed on.

Readings were given by Miss Betty May, Cumberland, and an "unknown clown", and last, but not least, Mrs. Harriett Blocher, 95, who recited a poem of her own composition, "The Unseen Hand". It was interesting to note, and rather unusual, that five generations of Mrs. Blocher's family were represented at this gathering. With Mrs. Blocher was her daughter, Mrs. Sally Bowers, and Mrs. Bower's daughter, Mrs. Silas Durst, Jennings; Mrs. Durst's daughter, Mrs. Neal Morris, with her son, Richard, Ohiopyle.

The Rev. J. F. Zimmerman, Cumberland, offered the opening and closing prayers and also made the principal address, giving a short history of the Broadwater family and discussing home and family life in general. Brief remarks were also made by Edward Lewis, assistant pastor of First Methodist church at Cresaptown, and the Rev. J. C. Beahm, pastor of the Maple Grove Church of the Brethren.

A letter of greeting from Charles L. Broadwater, ElSegundo, Calif., was read by W. J. Daniels, Cumberland, who recounted a brief history of the Charles L. Broadwater family. Mr. Broadwater is the father of Charles A. Broadwater, who was born in West Virginia, later moving to Missouri, and was instrumental in developing the western states.

According to custom, several prizes were distributed. Mr. and Mrs. Howard Metz, with their fifteen children, received the award for the largest family present, while honors for the oldest person attending was presented to Mrs. Harriett Blocher. The prize for the family coming the greatest distance went to Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Broadwater, Harmony, Minn., who traveled approximately 1000 miles in order to attend. The two-weeks-old baby of Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Resh was the youngest person present.

During the short business session, the same officers were re-elected, namely, Clarence L. Broadwater, Cumberland, honorary president; Ellis E. Broadwater, Cumberland, president; Miss Ethel Broadwater, Grantsville, secretary and treasurer, and Earl Broadwater, Grantsville, social director. The first Sunday in August was set as the date for the reunion next year, which will be held at the same place.

In addition to numerous persons from nearby communities, among those relatives coming from a distance were Mr. and Mrs. Louis H. Broadwater, Harmony, Minn.; Mr. and Mrs. Olin C. Broadwater, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Bittinger, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Bittinger, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hunter, Akron, O.; Dr. and Mrs. G. V. Broadwater and son, Russell, Middleburg; Mr. and Mrs. Howard Kight and daughter, Natalie, Mrs. Florence Walker, Ridgeley, W. Va.; Mrs. J. C. Shaw, Cleveland, O.; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Shaw, Johnstown, Pa.; Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Broadwater, Mr. and Mrs. G. C. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Tewalt, Hagerstown; Mr. and Mrs. Chester J. Broadwater, Brownsville, Pa., and Mr. and Mrs. Louis Taylor, Washington.

Dotts-Lewis

The marriage of Miss Blanche Lewis, daughter of Mrs. Margaret Lewis, Columbus, O., and Joseph Dotts, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Dotts, Fairmont, W. Va., took place at 8 o'clock Saturday evening at the Highland Avenue Methodist Episcopal church in Fairmont. The Rev. T. G. Meredith, a retired pastor, performed the simple ceremony.

The bride wore a dress of misty sand colored chiffon, with a hat to match, and carried a bouquet of Talisman roses. Miss Esther Shircliff, Columbus, who was her only attendant, was attired in brown and wore a shoulder corsage of roses. James Dotts, Fairmont, brother of the groom, served as best man.

Both Mr. Dotts and his bride are graduates of the Fairmont high school, class of 1934. Mrs. Dotts is also a graduate of the Steddam Tutering school of Columbus.

Mr. Dotts attended the University of West Virginia, from which he was graduated in 1939. While there he was president of the Forestry Club and also of the Agricultural Council. Frostburg Council Postpones Action On Auditing Bids

Audit for Past 18 Years Out of Question, Commissioners Told

FROSTBURG, Aug. 5—After discussing at considerable length three bids tonight for auditing the city's books, the mayor and city commissioners decided to hold a special meeting at a later date for the purpose of determining the number of years for which to ask for other competitive bids.

The bids submitted tonight were as follows: William Scott, Cumberland, former county auditor, $2 per hour or $12 for a six-hour day, until the audit is completed; Charles O. Hall, Baltimore, $500 for the past two fiscal years; and Harlan Johnson, Davis and Osborne, Baltimore, $500 for the past fiscal year.

No Audit for 18 Years

Phillip M. Osborne, representing his firm, stated that the cost of auditing the books for the past eighteen years, when the last audit is reported to have been made, would probably exceed an amount that the town could afford to pay.

He suggested an audit for the past year or two, which he said would result in disclosing methods by which the city's bookkeeping system could be improved and simplify the matter of an anpual audit in the future.

Commissioner William Lemmert, who introduced the resolution to have the audit made several weeks ago, offered a motion tonight to award the contract to Charles O. Hall to audit the books for two years at a cost of $500.

His motion failed for want of a second.

Matter Tabled

Council then decided, on motion of Commissioner Walter Powell, to give the matter further consideration.

During the discussion, Mayor Olin Gunnett stated that he resented the sensational" stories recently published concerning the city council, with particular reference to the proposed audit of the city's books.

He was presumably referring to articles appearing in a Cumberland weekly.

John Conrad, who was serving as special police officer for a few days during the absence of Chief Benjamin H. Thomas, appeared before council and questioned the right of the city to appoint an additional police officer without a competitive examination.

'Temporary' Appointment

Conrad referred not to his own appointment, but to the appointment of extra police following the installation of parking meters. He said his understanding was that qualified citizens out of work were to be given an opportunity to share the work on the police force.

Police Commissioner Walter Powell informed him that the special policeman, George Tipping, who has been on the force since the meters were installed in May, 1939, was a "temporary" appointment. Conrad replied that if council decided to place an additional officer on the force, he would like to make application for the post in the regular manner prescribed by the city charter.

Conrad was assured by the police commissioner that applications would be considered from anyone wishing to compete for the job when council decides to make the appointment permanent.

Water Question Up Again

An agreement between the city and the Frostburg Water Company submitted tonight providing for the sale of city water at $.40 per thousand gallons was ordered returned to the Frostburg Water Company for the purpose of having a clause inserted giving the city the right to raise the rate if it proves unprofitable to the city and also providing that the Frostburg Water Company be required to pay the expenses of connecting and disconnecting the water from time to time.

An ordinance was passed prohibiting the sale and discharge of fireworks in the city limits and one mile beyond, the one exception being that public display of fireworks will be permitted by a written permit from the police commissioner. The ordinance will become effective September 4.

Counsel for W. Va. Communist Head And Judge Clash in Wheeler Trial

BECKLEY, W. Va., Aug. 5 (AP)—A defense charge that "pressure was brought to bear" on persons who made affidavit they were misled into signing a Communist nominating petition was placed before a jury today at the fraud trial of Oscar O. Wheeler, Communist candidate for governor.

Harold W. Houston, defense attorney whose clash with Criminal Court Judge Harley M. Kilgore brought a promise of "summary action" for a repetition, said:

Doubts Misrepresentation

"I do not think the state can present one witness who can truthfully say the peetion was misrepresented."

He referred to a petition filed May 13 to place the Communist party on the West Virginia ballot in 1940. The petition is under attack by the American Legion but a scheduled injunction suit was postponed in Charleston today because of Wheeler's trial.

Houston contended that witnesses were intimidated into repudiating their signatures on the petition which bore a total of 8,684 names. The Communist party in 1932, the last time it was on the ballot, polled 444 votes for President.

Prosecutor W. A. Thornhill Jr. began to call his witnesses after Houston's opening statement. The state is attempting to prove that when Wheeler was collecting signatures he misrepresented his purpose and held the petition folded back so praspective signers could not read it.

Six Deputies On Hand

Wheeler, fifty-three-year-old goat farmer whose home is in the hills beyond Beckley, sat with his wife, also under indisctment, in a crowded court room where Sheriff H. G. Farmer posted six deputies to watch for any disturbances.

Other testimony presented by Thornhill apparently was directed at proving Wheeler attempted to escape after indictment.

Houston, who with Louis Fleischer of New York and Frank C. Burdette of Charleston form Wheeler's defense counsel, was reprimanded by Judge Kilgore after he persisted in asking Alexander Davis, negro porter, whether Davis had asked any election official or attorney if it was illegal to vote in a primary after signing a nomination petition.

After the first reprimand, Houston retorted:

"Well, if I haven't the privileges of a member of the bar, I won't ask any more questions."

'Summary Action' Threatened

Judge Kilgore replied:

"I don't like your attitude. I don't like the remark. And if there is any repetition, I will use summary action."

Houston immediately dropped cross-examination and left the courtroom.

West Virginians Now Get Married at Home

BECKLEY, W. Va., Aug. 5 (AP)—Abrupt rise in the number of marriage licenses issued in Raleigh county was reported by officials who attributed the increase partly to the Virginia pre-parital blood test law which became effective Thursday.

The Virginia law is similar to that effective in West Virginia since June, 1939. Officials explained that many persons prior to August 1 this year had gone to Virginia for their ceremonies.

Ritual Slaughtering Of Cattle Forbidden

AMSTERDAM, THE NETHERLANDS, Aug. 5 (AP) via Berlin) — A German decree today forbid the ritual slaughtering of cattle for Jewish consumption. The decree said the purpose was "to avoid torturing the animals."

For 150 years Brazil furnished the world's supply of diamonds. In 1867, however, the great South African diamond fields were discovered.

Theaters Today

New Double Bill Is Scheduled at Embassy

Another double bill will open tomorrow at the Embassy theater.

One feature will be Frieda Inescort and Otto Kruger in the emotional drama, "The Zero Hour."

The second feature will be Richard Talmadge in the action picture "Step On It." In addition, there will be another chapter of the serial, "Drums of Fu Manchu."

The second feature is Louise Platt and Donald Woods in "Forgotten Girls."

Herbert Is Featured In Comedy Film

Hugh Herbert and his expressive face are currently to be seen in the new Universal comedy, "Private Affairs," now showing at the New Liberty theater, with Nancy Kelly, Robert Cummings and Roland Young included in the cast.

The descriptive phrase about the putty face is a tribute to Herbert's unusually facile features. He can mold his face at will into any desired expression, mostly humorous, of course. And even in repose his face is comical.

Few people get so much fun out of life as Herbert. One reason is that he always has something to do. He has many civic interests to occupy the brief periods he can spare from his busy screen career.

Boy and His Dog Theme of Picture

One of the world's most basic combinations—a boy and his dog—provides the theme for Paramount's romance "The Biscuit Eater," a story of Southern country life which is now at the Garden theater.

The boy is played by little Billie Lee and the dog is portrayed by Promise, a handsome Georgia Pointer, who was brought to this country recently from England expressly to appear in the picture, and the story tells how the boy made a champion bird dog out of a "runt" or, to use the Southern expression for a dog of his type, a "biscuit eater."

Most of the cast of "The Biscuit Eater" has never appeared before motion picture cameras before. They are residents of Albany, Ga., where the picture was made. Besides Lee the cast includes Cordell Hickman, Helene Millard, Richard Lane, Lester Matthews and "Snowflake."

Four Stars Appear In Strand Picture

Boasting four stars, "The Man I Married" is showing at the Strand theater and will continue through tomorrowd. The Twentieth Century Fox film has Joan Bennett, Francis Lederer, Lloyd Nolan and Anna Sten in the top roles.

Prominently featured are Otto Kruger, Maria Ouspenskaya, Ludwig Stossel and Johnny Russell.

Coming Thursday and Friday are Al Donahue and his orchestra with the singing stars, Dee Keating and Phil Brito. This orchestra comes direct from the Steel pier in Atlantic City. To accomodate race week patrons, Mr. Donahue will appear four times at 2:42, 7:00, 9:02 and 11:04 p. m. The last complete screen and stage show will start at 10 p. m.

The screen show will be the comedy, "Sandy Is a Lady" starring Baby Sandy, Tom Brown, Nan Grey, and the funsters, Mischa Auer, Eugene Pallette, Billy Gilbert, Edgar Kennedy and Fritz Feld.

Starting Saturday the Strand will have the world premier of "The Return of Frank James" starring Henry Fonda. The Twentieth Century Fox picture is in technicolor.

Story of Sea Captain Is Maryland Feature

With Charles Coburn, Beulah Bondi, Helen Broderick, Billie Burke and Helen Westley in the principal character parts, and Virginia Grey and Dan Dailey, Jr., adding a romantic touch, the story tells the amusing tale of an old sea captain whom fate lands in an Old Ladies' Home where he becomes the center of intrigue among the old maids.

Coburn appears as a cantankerous but lovable old sea dog who finds himself the only male inmate of th home and is forced to make the best if not the most of it. Miss Bondi has the role of his wife.

The laughs are pretty equally divided among Helen Broderick, Billie Burke and Helen Westley, the former two as members of the Old Maid's Club and the latter as manager of the Home.

100 Sniffers Form Hay Fever Society

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (AP) —Some 100 sniffers have formed the Hay Fever Sufferers Society of America and began mapping a campaign against ambrosiaceae (the ragweed family) and some o its offshoots.

Almost anyone can join the HFSSA — All you need is a snuffle or a sniffle, watery eyes and an explosive sneeze now and then.

Urging all mid-summer kerchooers to attend the society's first annual convention Aug. 7 at the hotel St. George in Brooklyn, President Michael Dorfman declared:

"We're going to put 'teeth' into the law against having ragweed growing wild on your property; we're going to form ragweed detective squads to track down the enemy."

Then he sneezed and added: "We're getting sick of people saying 'gezundheit' every time we sneeze. It isn't American. If they want to say anything let 'em say:

"God bless you and America."

ANDY AND THE GIRL FRIEND QUARREL

24 Injured in Wreck Of Passenger Train

CENTRAL CITY, Ky., Aug. 5 (AP) — Twenty-four passengers were injured, one seriously, when the rear three cars of the "Louisiane" train of the Illinois Central Railroad were derailed early and overturned at Martwick, four miles north of here.

Scores of other passengers were shaken up.

P. C. Pettit of Memphis, Tenn., chief dispatcher for the road, was injured seriously about the face and body. He was taken to the Greenville, Ky., hospital. Most of the other twenty-four injured suffered cuts and bruises. A few suffered fractured ribs and toes.

Crew members said the accident occurred at 4:32 a. m., when the front tire of one of the small "trailer" wheels under the engine cab worked lose and spun on the axle, damaging about forty lengths of track.

Although the train was traveling about forty miles an hour, the crewmen said, all but the last four cars weathered the damaged track and one of those derailed remained upright.

The two Pullmans on the end of the train and chair car immediately in front of them ,however, overturned onto their sides, throwing passengers against the downside of the cars.

Most of the injured were among forty-two passengers in the chair car, many of whom were asleep.

O'Conor Asks State Departments To Save

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 5 (AP) — Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor has asked state departmental heads to save unspent departmental balances in "these final two months of the fiscal year."

A similar appeal last year, he said, brought a return of $363,000 to the state treasurer, helping to enable "the administration to end the fiscal year with a surplus of $4,000,000." About forty departments "contributed to the savings."

"I am determined to economize wherever possible, so that we can reduce taxes at the earliest possible moment," O'Conor said.

"Our state is in a sound financial position, our budget is balanced, our reserves sufficient and our bonds are held in high esteem by the investing public. The times, however, require the utmost prudence, caution and economy in the administration of governmental fiscal affairs, and every financial resource of the state must be conserved."

Woman Killed, Five Injured in Crash

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Aug. 5 (AP). Mrs. Frank Lancaster of Pleasant Valley near Moundsville was killed here in a collision of automobiles in which five other persons were injured.

Her husband, granddaughter and sister were taken to a Glendale hospital. William Neihaus and his brother, Carl, occupants of the other car, received first aid treatment near the scene of the accident and were taken home.

Mrs. Lancaster and the members of her family were enroute to church.

Ritual Slaughtering Of Cattle Forbidden

AMSTERDAM, THE NETHERLANDS, Aug. 5 (AP) via Berlin) — A German decree today forbid the ritual slaughtering of cattle for Jewish consumption. The decree said the purpose was "to avoid torturing the animals."

For 150 years Brazil furnished the world's supply of diamonds. In 1867, however, the great South African diamond fields were discovered.

Theaters Today

New Double Bill Is Scheduled at Embassy

Another double bill will open tomorrow at the Embassy theater.

One feature will be Frieda Inescort and Otto Kruger in the emotional drama, "The Zero Hour."

The second feature will be Richard Talmadge in the action picture "Step On It." In addition, there will be another chapter of the serial, "Drums of Fu Manchu."

Herbert Is Featured In Comedy Film

Hugh Herbert and his expressive face are currently to be seen in the new Universal comedy, "Private Affairs," now showing at the New Liberty theater, with Nancy Kelly, Robert Cummings and Roland Young included in the cast.

The descriptive phrase about the putty face is a tribute to Herbert's unusually facile features. He can mold his face at will into any desired expression, mostly humorous, of course. And even in repose his face is comical.

Few people get so much fun out of life as Herbert. One reason is that he always has something to do. He has many civic interests to occupy the brief periods he can spare from his busy screen career.

Boy and His Dog Theme of Picture

One of the world's most basic combinations—a boy and his dog—provides the theme for Paramount's romance "The Biscuit Eater," a story of Southern country life which is now at the Garden theater.

The boy is played by little Billie Lee and the dog is portrayed by Promise, a handsome Georgia Pointer, who was brought to this country recently from England expressly to appear in the picture, and the story tells how the boy made a champion bird dog out of a "runt" or, to use the Southern expression for a dog of his type, a "biscuit eater."

Most of the cast of "The Biscuit Eater" has never appeared before motion picture cameras before. They are residents of Albany, Ga., where the picture was made. Besides Lee the cast includes Cordell Hickman, Helene Millard, Richard Lane, Lester Matthews and "Snowflake."

Four Stars Appear In Strand Picture

Boasting four stars, "The Man I Married" is showing at the Strand theater and will continue through tomorrowd. The Twentieth Century Fox film has Joan Bennett, Francis Lederer, Lloyd Nolan and Anna Sten in the top roles.

Prominently featured are Otto Kruger, Maria Ouspenskaya, Ludwig Stossel and Johnny Russell.

Coming Thursday and Friday are Al Donahue and his orchestra with the singing stars, Dee Keating and Phil Brito. This orchestra comes direct from the Steel pier in Atlantic City. To accomodate race week patrons, Mr. Donahue will appear four times at 2:42, 7:00, 9:02 and 11:04 p. m. The last complete screen and stage show will start at 10 p. m.

The screen show will be the comedy, "Sandy Is a Lady" starring Baby Sandy, Tom Brown, Nan Grey, and the funsters, Mischa Auer, Eugene Pallette, Billy Gilbert, Edgar Kennedy and Fritz Feld.

Starting Saturday the Strand will have the world premier of "The Return of Frank James" starring Henry Fonda. The Twentieth Century Fox picture is in technicolor.

ANDY AND THE GIRL FRIEND QUARREL

When Andy Hardy falls head-over-heels for a New York debutante it looks as though Polly Benedict will be left in the lurch. The young sweethearts of the Hardy Family series come close to the parting of the ways in "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante," latest of the series, which opens Thursday at the Maryland theater, but you can be sure that Ann Rutherford and Mickey Rooney make up again before the final fadeout.

Story of Sea Captain Is Maryland Feature

"The Captain Is a Lady" is the current feature offering at the Maryland theater.

With Charles Coburn, Beulah Bondi, Helen Broderick, Billie Burke and Helen Westley in the principal character parts, and Virginia Grey and Dan Dailey, Jr., adding a romantic touch, the story tells the amusing tale of an old sea captain whom fate lands in an Old Ladies' Home where he becomes the center of intrigue among the old maids.

Coburn appears as a cantankerous but lovable old sea dog who finds himself the only male inmate of th home and is forced to make the best if not the most of it. Miss Bondi has the role of his wife.

The laughs are pretty equally divided among Helen Broderick, Billie Burke and Helen Westley, the former two as members of the Old Maid's Club and the latter as manager of the Home.

100 Sniffers Form Hay Fever Society

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (AP) —Some 100 sniflers have formed the Hay Fever Sufferers Society of America and began mapping a campaign against ambrosiaceae (the ragweed family) and some o its offshoots.

Almost anyone can join the HFSSA — All you need is a snuffle or a sniffle, watery eyes and an explosive sneeze now and then.

Urging all mid-summer kerchooers to attend the society's first annual convention Aug. 7 at the hotel St. George in Brooklyn, President Michael Dorfman declared:

"We're going to put 'teeth' into the law against having ragweed growing wild on your property; we're going to form ragweed detective squads to track down the enemy."

Then he sneezed and added: "We're getting sick of people saying 'gezundheit' every time we sneeze. It isn't American. If they want to say anything let 'em say:

"God bless you and America."

24 Injured in Wreck Of Passenger Train

CENTRAL CITY, Ky., Aug. 5 (AP) — Twenty-four passengers were injured, one seriously, when the rear three cars of the "Louisiane" train of the Illinois Central Railroad were derailed early and overturned at Martwick, four miles north of here.

Scores of other passengers were shaken up.

P. C. Pettit of Memphis, Tenn., chief dispatcher for the road, was injured seriously about the face and body. He was taken to the Greenville, Ky., hospital. Most of the other twenty-four injured suffered cuts and bruises. A few suffered fractured ribs and toes.

Crew members said the accident occurred at 4:32 a. m., when the front tire of one of the small "trailer" wheels under the engine cab worked lose and spun on the axle, damaging about forty lengths of track.

Although the train was traveling about forty miles an hour, the crewmen said, all but the last four cars weathered the damaged track and one of those derailed remained upright.

The two Pullmans on the end of the train and chair car immediately in front of them ,however, overturned onto their sides, throwing passengers against the downside of the cars.

Most of the injured were among forty-two passengers in the chair car, many of whom were asleep.

O'Conor Asks State Departments To Save

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 5 (AP) — Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor has asked state departmental heads to save unspent departmental balances in "these final two months of the fiscal year."

A similar appeal last year, he said, brought a return of $363,000 to the state treasurer, helping to enable "the administration to end the fiscal year with a surplus of $4,000,000." About forty departments "contributed to the savings."

"I am determined to economize wherever possible, so that we can reduce taxes at the earliest possible moment," O'Conor said.

"Our state is in a sound financial position, our budget is balanced, our reserves sufficient and our bonds are held in high esteem by the investing public. The times, however, require the utmost prudence, caution and economy in the administration of governmental fiscal affairs, and every financial resource of the state must be conserved."

Woman Killed, Five Injured in Crash

MOUNDSVILLE, W. Va., Aug. 5 (AP). Mrs. Frank Lancaster of Pleasant Valley near Moundsville was killed here in a collision of automobiles in which five other persons were injured.

Her husband, granddaughter and sister were taken to a Glendale hospital. William Neihaus and his brother, Carl, occupants of the other car, received first aid treatment near the scene of the accident and were taken home.

Mrs. Lancaster and the members of her family were enroute to church.

Whitehead Hurls No-Hitter over Detroit

Veteran Turns in 4-0 Win as Browns Lose Opener 9 to 2

Spectacular Stops Save Hurler in Short Contest

Called because of Rain after Five and Half Innings

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 5 (AP)—Back at their pastime of knocking off the league leaders, the St. Louis Browns used a no-hit no-run pitching performance by Johnny Whitehead to dump the Detroit Tigers today, 4 to 0, in a 5 1-12-inning nightcap of a doubleheader.

Although they won the opener, 9 to 2, the loss in the second game, which was cut short by rain, forced the Tigers to yield first place to the Cleveland Indians. It was the third time this season that the Browns had knocked a team out of the lead.

Only two men reached first base against Whitehead in Detroit's six turns at bat. Frank Metha getting a base on balls in the third inning and Hank Greensberg being safe on an error in the fourth. Neither advanced to second base.

The Tigers hit away hard at Whitehead's offering and it took several sensational stops catchers to safeguard the pitcher's abbreviated no-hitter.

Whitehead, whom the Browns obtained from the Chicago White Sox last year, was ineffective at the start of this season and was sent to the minors. He came up again two weeks ago.

Walter Judnich hit his twentieth home run of the season for the Browns with a man on base in the third inning of the game. The Browns added an error-tainted run in the fourth and another through Tommy Bridges' wildness in the fifth.

Schoolboy Rowe limited the Browns to six scattered hits in the opener which the Tigers won without much effort. It was Rowe's tenth victory against two defeats.

Dodgers Shutout New York 6 to 0

By SID FEDER

BROOKLYN, Aug. 5 (AP) — To the audible enjoyment of 31,790 happy Flatbushers, the Brooklyn Dodgers humbled their hated rivals, the New York Giants, 6 to 0, tonight behind the six-hit hurling of Whitlow Wyatt.

It was the first time the two teams ever had met at night.

With Dixie Walker contributing four hits and scoring three runs, the Dodgers landed on Harry Gumbert for a run in the first frame, piled four across at the expense of Gumbert and Paul (Daffy) Dean in the sixth, and finished up with one in the seventh.

Meantime Wyatt, posting his fourth shut-out and eleventh win of the campaign, mowed down sweet William Terry's Terriers with little trouble. He had only a few moments of anxiety, such as the second inning when Hank Danning led off with a single, and the fourth frame when Burgess Whitehead singled and Danning doubled.

For the second straight game, Ducky Medwick, the Dodgers' $200,000 outfield beauty, was on the sidelines — benched for weak hitting — but his absence wasn't noticeable from the Dodger attack.

Singles by Walker and Dolph Camilli and Babe Phelps' fly produced the first-inning run. In the sixth, the Giants fell apart as Walker doubled, Camilli and Pete Reiser walked, Phelps and Johnny Hudson singled, and Mickey Witek fumbled a double-play ball and Mel Ott mis-played a hit in right field for four Dodger markers.

The final run came across on singles by Walker and Reister and Jimmy Wasdell's double.

Jockeys Have To Think Quick and Act Just as Fast

Split-second Decisions Call for Alert Action By Pilots

By GRANTLAND RICE

SARATOGA, N. Y.—They were talking about quick thinking in sport—in the competition that called for snap judgments on a more important scale—the quarterback, the pitcher, the fighter, in the sweat and tunmoil of a championship.

The group consisted of several jockeys now riding at Saratoga, jockeys who had played golf, who had followed baseball, football and other sports.

"You had a piece once," a rider remarked, "in which you told how little time a football quarterback had to call the next play compared to second-guessers in the stands. It might be a play that is to win or lose the game and he has about ten seconds in which to make up his mind. That isn't much. But what about the quick thinking or snap judgment a jockey often has to make? Ever think of that?"

"Probably not as much as we should have or might have," we admitted.

"Well," he said, "there are many times we have to think faster than any quarterback. Here's a certain race where I have to go inside or swing outside. Gambling on the inside spot I might get shut off and never get out. Swinging to the outside I might lose too much ground.

"When an opening develops you have less than a split second to decide your move. Ten seconds? Why, in ten seconds a good horse will take you two hundred yards. No seconds for us. There are horses inside of you, outside of you, in front of you and behind you. There may be a certain horse in front of which you are not afraid. There may be one behind you which is much more dangerous."

More Than Riding A Horse

"Being a good jockey," one of them said, "means much more than just riding a horse. Many of us play golf. We know how important concentration is in golf—how hard it is to keep on thinking of the right things. It's even tougher in a tough race. You get your instructions from the trainer. You start out to follow these instructions. But a lot of things can happen that the trainer and the jockey and even the horse never thought about in advance. And they can happen in a hurry, especially in a big field.

"First of all, you've got to get away right. Even with the new starting gate a horse can be looking the other way or be off balance when the barrier opens. Then you've got to know and judge your horse. You've also got to know and judge the other horses—the front runners and the stretch finishers which come from nowhere such as Russia. Fencing, Kievex and others, which may be twenty lengths behind and then bowl 'em over down the stretch.

"You may be following your instructions perfectly, up to a certain point. Then a lot of things you never looked for begin to happen. You are caught in a tight spot. You've got to find a hole somewhere, just as a halfback does in football.

"If you are riding a certain type of horse—fast and game—you probably won't take the gamble. You'll swing him wide, get him free from any interference, and then depend on his speed down the stretch.

"But you may not be on that type of horse. You may be on a horse for which you must save all the ground you can. Then you've got to find that opening and cut in. You've got to take the chance. But you've also got to make up your mind in a big hurry when you may be trying to see what others are doing."

Another Angle

"Here's another angle," someone cut in. "There's no living trainer or jockey who knows on what day a horse may want to run—or not want to run."

Sonny Workman told me that some time before.

"Why do good horses suddenly quit on you? Why will a punk plater suddenly start running like a stake horse?"

"I don't know—and neither does anyone else."

That recalled the day I sat with Johnny Longden, one of the best, at Santa Anita. A certain horse was in the race. I asked Longden about him.

"I've ridden him four times," Johnny said. "He's a one-thirteen horse at best for six furlongs."

That day he won in 1.10 4-5.

"How could I know," Longden groaned, "that he was going to be over two seconds faster today than he ever was before? That's twelve lengths."

"No, you never know about a horse until the race is on," another said, "and then it's too late. We get accused for this and that, but a horse isn't a human being. A track coach can talk to his sprinters or jumpers. They can tell him things—whether they are stale or not, whether they have a bad ankle or a stiff leg. A track coach has a pipe job compared to a horse trainer. The horse can't tell him anything. And by the time we find out in a race, it may be too late."

I asked Earl Sande one day about The Chief.

"He can outrun any horse on the track today, but I don't bet on him. He only likes to run about once out of every five or six starts, and he won't tell me which day he feels like moving along.

"There's a lot of racing luck," Sande continued. "The crowd never sees. As a jockey and a trainer I ought to know at least a little about it. You can get bumped—you can get crowded—you can get shut off. In an automobile accident you may have driven perfectly, but suppose the other fellow made a mistake? The best jockey in the world can get caught in a spot he can't handle and he may be on the best horse. The best horse with the best jockey may be the best bet—but they don't always win.

"I only wish the racing crowd could know just what can happen in the way of racing luck when the field is fairly well matched—and I only wish the racing crowd could tell us just how certain horses feel about running on certain days."

Ostermueller Has Good Day, Beating Yankees by 4 to 1

Scatters Seven Hits and Gets Good Support from Bosox

BOSTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—Lefty Fritz Ostermueller, who couldn't get going in the first half of the season, pitched the Boston Red Sox to a 4 to 1 victory over the New York Yankees today.

Ostermueller kept seven hits well scattered, no more than one to an inning, and a shutout until the eighth when he walked two men and Joe DiMaggio singled one of them home.

Ernie Bonham, a righthander recalled last week from Kansas City, went the whole distance for the Yankees and did a plucky job of spacing ten hits. But one of them was Jimmie Foxx's twenty-fifth home run behind a walk to Manager Joe Cronin in the fifth.

Successive doubles by Ted Williams and Lou Finney brought Boston's first run in the second and in the fourth the Red Sox scored another when, with two out, Tom Henrich intentionally dropped Dom DiMaggio's pop fly to try for a double play.

DeLuca Succeeds Geatz As Manager of Colts

Sammy DeLuca has been named manager of the Cumberland Colts to succeed Sonny Geatz, who resigned because of business and due to the fact that the added duties were impairing his health.

Geatz' resignation was accepted at a meeting of the club players last night at Trozzo's Restaurant. Business Manager Frank Trozzo, President E. B. Treet and Secretary-Treasurer Russ O'Neill were also in attendance at the session.

DeLuca, popular all-around South End athlete, will take over the post of pilot immediately.

CCC Men's Golf Team Defeated at Hagerstown

HAGERSTOWN, Aug. 5—Fountain Head Country Club men golfers of Hagerstown defeated Cumberland Country Club shotmakers in a team match here Saturday 49 to 26.

Carroll Boggs, Cumberland pro who had an eagle two on the eleventh hole, turned in low net score of 69 while the combination of Boggs and Ed Mattingly had the best ball of 65.

There were 25 foursomes but several Cumberland teams included local golfers who were pressed into service in order to give all the visiting linksmen a chance to show their wares.

THE FOUR HORSEMEN RIDE AGAIN

Famine, War, Pestilence, Death laugh in their merry glee.
They look to the sky above for help, they look to the land and sea.
"O, this is our record crop," they call. "This is our farthest span—
We'll reap a harvest beyond all time, since the first gray dawn of man."

Famine, War, Pestilence, Death take to the road once more.
Galloping side by side they rush to an all-age record score.
"O, we were pikers before," they call, "now we have learned our trade;
From the blazing sky to the ocean's blast we're off on the Ghost Parade.

"Attila, Tamerlane, Genghis Kahn were puny, as we ride by.
They used the land. We use the sea—we call on the red-flamed sky.
We are galloping now through a billion dreams that crash as force our play—
We are making the devil squirm in hell as we've taken his job away."

Mental Angles

Sitting in the steaming heat of the Red dugout with Bill McKechnie, the Cincinnati mandarin, the topic swung around to the odd mental angles in sport. There had to be an odd mental angle attached to your correspondent, for the thermometer was only 93 outside against 110 in the dugout.

"Here's an important part of competitive sport that is always hard to figure out," Bill said. "It has nothing to do with any intellectual side. Mental kinks can invade the better brains.

"For example, there is the case of young Johnny Vander Meer. Here is the kid who set a world's record with two consecutive no-hit games. He was moving along like a blue streak. And then, suddenly, he loses all confidence in himself and can't find the plate.

"Physically, Johnny has remained in fine condition. His arm carries no part of a king. He can throw as hard as he ever threw. But he has to go back to the minors to find himself."

"What are his chances?" I asked Bill.

"I still believe in him," McKechnie said. "I'm for him strong and have no idea of letting him get away. He is still young, smart and game. I don't know how long it will take him to work his way back from the snarl he is in, but I believe more work will solve his problem."

"You wouldn't want to add another star to Derringer, Walters and Thompson?" I asked Bill.

The Main Angle

"What is the first essential on the mental side?" I asked Uncle Bill.

"First of all," he said, "you must believe in yourself. You must have the needed confidence to handle your job.

"A good hitter should always feel he has something on the pitcher. This goes in reverse for the good pitcher. A good ball players ought to like his chance to come through in a pinch. He ought to like pressure.

"Worry is one of the killing ailments. This leads to overtrying and to tightening up. You'd be surprised how many are afflicted this way. It's a normal, human trait. The ball player who can miss it is lucky. When Vander Meer began to lose it was worry that made him wilder than ever. He was too anxious to make good."

Which recalls the old pinch-hitting days of Moose McCormick of the Giants.

"I always felt that the pitcher was shivering when I came up," Moose used to say. "I worked myself into a feeling that I couldn't miss."

The Place of Porky Oliver

There was quite a discussion as to what might have happened if Ed Oliver, known as Porky, had been allowed to take part in the Little-Sarazen playoff at Canterbury, Cleveland, in the last Open.

The 23-year-old fat boy has shown since that he was no fluke campaigner. His watch may be out of gear now and then, but there is nothing wrong with his backswing.

Since that Cleveland turmoil Oliver and Little finished all square at medal play with 138 in a recent test. A few days ago Oliver won the St. Paul classic, one of the bigger and better tournaments of the year, with 276, just two strokes in front of the Open champion who is still playing brilliant golf.

So, in his last 108 holes of golf the prodigious Porky, with 225 pounds of pivot, has been 18 under even fours. Which is moving in a hurry.

Gene Sarazen has signed up Oliver for a competitive tour.

"The kid is a natural," Gene told me. "He has plenty in the way of color and he can also play a lot of golf. He has the sympathy of the crowd after that Canterbury mix-up. Here's another thing—he can hit that ball a long, long way and most of the time straight down the middle."

It would be hard to find more color in a single pair than Oliver and Sarazen carry.

Sarazen on Concentration

We were discussing the fact that Bobby Jones always said he had to think of at least three things in playing a shot.

"I don't figure it quite that way," Gene said. "As I walk up to my ball I try to figure in advance the distance and the club I need. I look at the trouble ahead and if it's bad I want any mistake I might make to be away from it—not in it ... I decide the most shot is a number 4 iron I step up and play the shot without trying to think about anything else.

"The same thing goes for a putt. I line the putt up as I walk up to the ball. I decide also on the speed of the green. By the time I have taken my stance I am ready for the stroke. Too many modern golfers take too much time around the greens. This hurts more than it helps. You can't be an engineer and a golfer at the same time. I'd never hole a putt if I had to take as long as so many of them do today."

Payoff Pitching Brings Bucs Home With 10-4 Record

Corsairs Currently Are Hottest Team in National

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 5 (AP) —Payoff pitching brought the Pittsburgh Pirates home today from their most successful road trip in several years with a record of ten games won and four lost.

Currently, the Pirates' form is about the best in the majors and is attributed mainly to the steady hurling, in sharp contrast to the sorrowful spectacle presented earlier in the season when the Bucs were staggering under poor pitching.

Rip Sewell, the Plant City, Florida ,right-hander, seems to be shaping up as the ace of the fast-developing Pirate hurling staff. He notched three more victories on the eastern trip, including his four-hitter against the Phils yesterday, to bring his triumphs for the season to nine against two losses.

"Fireman" Mace Brown, who several times has been graduated from the bullpen to the starting assignment, likely will matriculate again into a starter as the Pirates open a drive tomorrow to push into the first division. He pitched a three-hitter Saturday.

Other hurlers contributing to the improved game of the Pirates are Johnny Lanning, Danny MacFayden, Ken Heintzelman and Dick Lanahan.

The Pirates have chalked up 13 victories in their last 17 encounters and 21 in their last 30. They take on the Cubs and Cards this week, beginning tomorrow.

Mel Harder Goes Route First Time This Year To Win

Veteran Cleveland Hurler Beats White Sox by 10-1 Score

CHICAGO, Aug. 5 (AP)—Mel Harder, veteran Cleveland right-hander, went the distance for the first time this season today, pitching a five-hit, 10 to 1 victory over the Chicago White Sox in the first of a four-game series.

The only Sox run came on Mike Keevich's home run over centerfielder Roy Weatherly's head inside the park in the third inning.

Harder, who never reaches the top form until mid-season, now has won seven and lost seven.

The pennant-hungry Indians rushed into a three-run lead in the second inning off chunky Ed Smith, a southpaw. Four singles by Rollie Hensley, Ben Chapman, Weatherly and Lou Boudreau and a fumble by Smith produced the tallies. They added two more in the fourth on doubles by Boudreau and Beau Bell, sandwiched around Hal Trosky's single.

Keegan Gassers Win, Merchants Lose Tourney

BALTIMORE, Aug. 5—Thanks to a forfeit victory, the Keegan Gassers of Cumberland's City League remained in the running today for the Maryland State Softball Association tournament championship.

The Gassers scored a 7-0 default decision when the Glenn L. Martin Sheet Metal crew failed to appear for a first-round battle here yesterday but another Cumberland entry, the North End Merchants outfit, wasn't so lucky, losing to American Can of Baltimore 1-0.

American Can scored the only run on a wild pitch in the first inning. The winners collected four hits and the Western Marylanders garnered two in an errorless game.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (AP) — It may not be so long before sports fans perusing tournament results will be reading: "Don Budge, 71-69—140" instead of "Don Budge defeated Jasper Baseline, 6-1, 6-0, 8-0." The gangling redhead is seriously considering taking up golf, and seriously.

Perhaps it is the Ellsworth Vines influence; maybe the fact that he has no more competition in his own field than the Sun is a factor. Whatever the reason, he has gathered about him all the accouterment of a linksman and is fit as a fiddle and ready to learn.

And what's more, he could develop into a very good golfer. Alex Morrison says so, and Alex Morrison, the storm center of many a golf argument, knows the game inside out and can scent latent ability a mile away.

Morrison played a round with Budge the other day. It was only the 16th time Budge had played, but he had a 95, and for his "some again" shot had a 250-yard drive on the last hole.

"He has the competitive instinct," Morrison says, "and he is an exceptionally good putter—has the eye of a champion. I don't know how much Vines has had to do with his idea of becoming a golfer, but I gathered that Vines success in switching from tennis to golf might be a factor as he kept saying 'Ellie did this' and 'Ellie did that.'

"I don't mean to say that he would give up tennis, but I think he would like to develop into a good tournament golfer. He's that kind of fellow. If he takes up something there's no half-way about it. He wants to be good. That's his competitive instinct, the reason he refuses to pull his punches in any tennis match.

"I think," Morris concluded, "that he might develop into a better player than Vines."

Vines, after an amateur and pro tennis career that practically parallels that of Budge, deserted the sport to concentrate on the development of his golf game, and he's good enough now to be rated at least a mild threat in any amateur tournament.

* * *

The switching from tennis to golf is no simple matter, Morrison points out. In fact, he frowns on his pupils playing tennis, or at least too much of it.

Tennis is a one-armed game for the most part, although Jack Bromwich with his dual grip makes it look like a cross between baseball and sweeping out the kitchen. Tennis players usually have trouble coordinating their two hands in golf.

Vines made the switch successfully, and Budge undoubtedly thinks there is no reason why he can't. He has a good physique for golf—tall and loose, with supple hands and wrists.

He has cornered about all the honors tennis has to offer. He is comfortably fixed financially, and would be even better fixed if the war hadn't nipped a world tour before it really started.

He has a good job with a sporting goods company, gives exhibitions and instructs. In fact, he is a young man sitting on top of the world.

But he loves competition, and as a man who refuses to pull his punches he can't get enough of that playing club champions, or even his fellow pros.

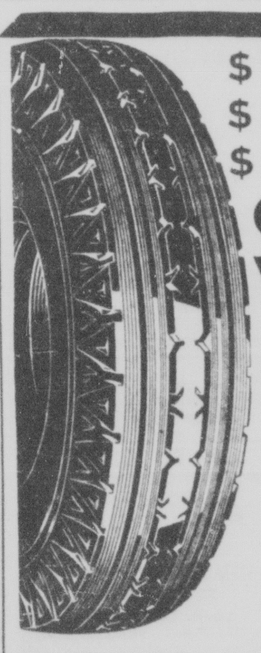

Golf may provide an outlet there. A golfer never runs out of competition, although competition sometimes runs out of the golfer. At any rate, if Donald redhead screws up that ruddy pan of his and really starts working on golf, it's a safe bet he'll wind up as a fair country performer.

Whitehead Hurls No-Hitter over Detroit

Veteran Turns in 4-0 Win as Browns Lose Opener 9 to 2

Spectacular Stops Save Hurler in Short Contest

Called because of Rain after Five and Half Innings

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 5 (AP)—Back at their pastime of knocking off the league leaders, the St. Louis Browns used a no-hit no-run pitching performance by Johnny Whitehead to dump the Detroit Tigers today, 4 to 0, in a 5 1-12-inning nightcap of a doubleheader.

Although they won the opener, 9 to 2, the loss in the second game, which was cut short by rain, forced the Tigers to yield first place to the Cleveland Indians. It was the third time this season that the Browns had knocked a team out of the lead.

Only two men reached first base against Whitehead in Detroit's six turns at bat. Frank Metha getting a base on balls in the third inning and Hank Greensberg being safe on an error in the fourth. Neither advanced to second base.

The Tigers hit away hard at Whitehead's offering and it took several sensational stops catchers to safeguard the pitcher's abbreviated no-hitter.

Whitehead, whom the Browns obtained from the Chicago White Sox last year, was ineffective at the start of this season and was sent to the minors. He came up again two weeks ago.

Walter Judnich hit his twentieth home run of the season for the Browns with a man on base in the third inning of the game. The Browns added an error-tainted run in the fourth and another through Tommy Bridges' wildness in the fifth.

Schoolboy Rowe limited the Browns to six scattered hits in the opener which the Tigers won without much effort. It was Rowe's tenth victory against two defeats.

The SPORT TRAIL

By WHITNEY MARTIN

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (AP) — It may not be so long before sports fans perusing tournament results will be reading: "Don Budge, 71-69—140" instead of "Don Budge defeated Jasper Baseline, 6-1, 6-0, 6-0." The gangling redhead is seriously considering taking up golf, and seriously.

Perhaps it is the Ellsworth Vines influence; maybe the fact that he has no more competition in his own field than the Sun is a factor. Whatever the reason, he has gathered about him all the accouterment of a linksman and is fit as a fiddle and ready to learn.

And what's more, he could develop into a very good golfer. Alex Morrison says so, and Alex Morrison, the storm center of many a golf argument, knows the game inside out and can scent latent ability a mile away.

Morrison played a round with Budge the other day. It was only the 16th time Budge had played, but he had a 95, and for his "some again" shot had a 250-yard drive on the last hole.

"He has the competitive instinct," Morrison says, "and he is an exceptionally good putter—has the eye of a champion. I don't know how much Vines has had to do with his idea of becoming a golfer, but I gathered that Vines success in switching from tennis to golf might be a factor as he kept saying 'Ellie did this' and 'Ellie did that.'

"I don't mean to say that he would give up tennis, but I think he would like to develop into a good tournament golfer. He's that kind of fellow. If he takes up something there's no half-way about it. He wants to be good. That's his competitive instinct, the reason he refuses to pull his punches in any tennis match.

"I think," Morris concluded, "that he might develop into a better player than Vines."

Vines, after an amateur and pro tennis career that practically parallels that of Budge, deserted the sport to concentrate on the development of his golf game, and he's good enough now to be rated at least a mild threat in any amateur tournament.

* * *

The switching from tennis to golf is no simple matter, Morrison points out. In fact, he frowns on his pupils playing tennis, or at least too much of it.

Tennis is a one-armed game for the most part, although Jack Bromwich with his dual grip makes it look like a cross between baseball and sweeping out the kitchen. Tennis players usually have trouble coordinating their two hands in golf.

Vines made the switch successfully, and Budge undoubtedly thinks there is no reason why he can't. He has a good physique for golf—tall and loose, with supple hands and wrists.

He has cornered about all the honors tennis has to offer. He is comfortably fixed financially, and would be even better fixed if the war hadn't nipped a world tour before it really started.

He has a good job with a sporting goods company, gives exhibitions and instructs. In fact, he is a young man sitting on top of the world.

But he loves competition, and as a man who refuses to pull his punches he can't get enough of that playing club champions, or even his fellow pros.

Golf may provide an outlet there. A golfer never runs out of competition, although competition sometimes runs out of the golfer. At any rate, if Donald redhead screws up that ruddy pan of his and really starts working on golf, it's a safe bet he'll wind up as a fair country performer.

Dodgers Shutout New York 6 to 0

By SID FEDER

BROOKLYN, Aug. 5 (AP) — To the audible enjoyment of 31,790 happy Flatbushers, the Brooklyn Dodgers humbled their hated rivals, the New York Giants, 6 to 0, tonight behind the six-hit hurling of Whitlow Wyatt.

It was the first time the two teams ever had met at night.

With Dixie Walker contributing four hits and scoring three runs, the Dodgers landed on Harry Gumbert for a run in the first frame, piled four across at the expense of Gumbert and Paul (Daffy) Dean in the sixth, and finished up with one in the seventh.

Meantime Wyatt, posting his fourth shut-out and eleventh win of the campaign, mowed down sweet William Terry's Terriers with little trouble. He had only a few moments of anxiety, such as the second inning when Hank Danning led off with a single, and the fourth frame when Burgess Whitehead singled and Danning doubled.

For the second straight game, Ducky Medwick, the Dodgers' $200,000 outfield beauty, was on the sidelines — benched for weak hitting — but his absence wasn't noticeable from the Dodger attack.

Singles by Walker and Dolph Camilli and Babe Phelps' fly produced the first-inning run. In the sixth, the Giants fell apart as Walker doubled, Camilli and Pete Reiser walked, Phelps and Johnny Hudson singled, and Mickey Witek fumbled a double-play ball and Mel Ott mis-played a hit in right field for four Dodger markers.

The final run came across on singles by Walker and Reister and Jimmy Wasdell's double.

Jockeys Have To Think Quick and Act Just as Fast

Split-second Decisions Call for Alert Action By Pilots

By GRANTLAND RICE

SARATOGA, N. Y.—They were talking about quick thinking in sport—in the competition that called for snap judgments on a more important scale—the quarterback, the pitcher, the fighter, in the sweat and tunmoil of a championship.

The group consisted of several jockeys now riding at Saratoga, jockeys who had played golf, who had followed baseball, football and other sports.

"You had a piece once," a rider remarked, "in which you told how little time a football quarterback had to call the next play compared to second-guessers in the stands. It might be a play that is to win or lose the game and he has about ten seconds in which to make up his mind. That isn't much. But what about the quick thinking or snap judgment a jockey often has to make? Ever think of that?"

"Probably not as much as we should have or might have," we admitted.

"Well," he said, "there are many times we have to think faster than any quarterback. Here's a certain race where I have to go inside or swing outside. Gambling on the inside spot I might get shut off and never get out. Swinging to the outside I might lose too much ground.

"When an opening develops you have less than a split second to decide your move. Ten seconds? Why, in ten seconds a good horse will take you two hundred yards. No seconds for us. There are horses inside of you, outside of you, in front of you and behind you. There may be a certain horse in front of which you are not afraid. There may be one behind you which is much more dangerous."

More Than Riding A Horse

"Being a good jockey," one of them said, "means much more than just riding a horse. Many of us play golf. We know how important concentration is in golf—how hard it is to keep on thinking of the right things. It's even tougher in a tough race. You get your instructions from the trainer. You start out to follow these instructions. But a lot of things can happen that the trainer and the jockey and even the horse never thought about in advance. And they can happen in a hurry, especially in a big field.

"First of all, you've got to get away right. Even with the new starting gate a horse can be looking the other way or be off balance when the barrier opens. Then you've got to know and judge your horse. You've also got to know and judge the other horses—the front runners and the stretch finishers which come from nowhere such as Russia, Fencing, Klevex and others, which may be twenty lengths behind and then bowl 'em over down the stretch.

"You may be following your instructions perfectly, up to a certain point. Then a lot of things you never looked for begin to happen. You are caught in a tight spot. You've got to find a hole somewhere, just as a halfback does in football.

"If you are riding a certain type of horse—fast and game—you probably won't take the gamble. You'll swing him wide, get him free from any interference, and then depend on his speed down the stretch.

"But you may not be on that type of horse. You may be on a horse for which you must save all the ground you can. Then you've got to find that opening and cut in. You've got to take the chance. But you've also got to make up your mind in a big hurry when you may be trying to see what others are doing."

Another Angle

"Here's another angle," someone cut in. "There's no living trainer or jockey who knows on what day a horse may want to run—or not want to run."

Sonny Workman told me that some time before.

"Why do good horses suddenly quit on you? Why will a punk plater suddenly start running like a stake horse?"

"I don't know—and neither does anyone else."

That recalled the day I sat with Johnny Longden, one of the best, at Santa Anita. A certain horse was in the race. I asked Longden about him.

"I've ridden him four times," Johnny said. "He's a one-thirteen horse at best for six furlongs."

That day he won in 1.10 4-5.

"How could I know," Longden groaned, "that he was going to be over two seconds faster today than he ever was before? That's twelve lengths."

"No, you never know about a horse until the race is on," another said, "and then it's too late. We get accused for this and that, but a horse isn't a human being. A track coach can talk to his sprinters or jumpers. They can tell him things—whether they are stale or not, whether they have a bad ankle or a stiff leg. A track coach has a pipe job compared to a horse trainer. The horse can't tell him anything. And by the time we find out in a race, it may be too late."

I asked Earl Sande one day about The Chief.

"He can outrun any horse on the track today, but I don't bet on him. He only likes to run about once out of every five or six starts, and he won't tell me which day he feels like moving along.

"There's a lot of racing luck," Sande continued. "The crowd never sees. As a jockey and a trainer I ought to know at least a little about it. You can get bumped—you can get crowded—you can get shut off. In an automobile accident you may have driven perfectly, but suppose the other fellow made a mistake? The best jockey in the world can get caught in a spot he can't handle and he may be on the best horse. The best horse with the best jockey may be the best bet—but they don't always win.

"I only wish the racing crowd could know just what can happen in the way of racing luck when the field is fairly well matched—and I only wish the racing crowd could tell us just how certain horses feel about running on certain days."

Ostermueller Has Good Day, Beating Yankees by 4 to 1

Scatters Seven Hits and Gets Good Support from Bosox

BOSTON, Aug. 5 (AP)—Lefty Fritz Ostermueller, who couldn't get going in the first half of the season, pitched the Boston Red Sox to a 4 to 1 victory over the New York Yankees today.

Ostermueller kept seven hits well scattered, no more than one to an inning, and a shutout until the eighth when he walked two men and Joe DiMaggio singled one of them home.

Ernie Bonham, a righthander re called last week from Kansas City, went the whole distance for the Yankees and did a plucky job of spacing ten hits. But one of them was Jimmie Foxx's twenty-fifth home run behind a walk to Manager Joe Cronin in the fifth.

Successive doubles by Ted Williams and Lou Finney brought Boston's first run in the second and in the fourth the Red Sox scored another when, with two out, Tom Henrich intentionally dropped Dom DiMaggio's pop fly to try for a double play.

THE FOUR HORSEMEN RIDE AGAIN

They look to the sky above for help, they look to the land and sea.
"O, this is our record crop," they call. "This is our farthest span—

Galloping side by side they rush to an all-age record score.
"O, we were pikers before," they call, "now we have learned our trade;
From the blazing sky to the ocean's blast we're off on the Ghost Parade.

They used the land. We use the sea—we call on the red-flamed sky.
We are galloping now through a billion dreams that crash as force our play—

Mental Angles

Sitting in the steaming heat of the Red dugout with Bill McKechnie, the Cincinnati mandarin, the topic swung around to the odd mental angles in sport. There had to be an odd mental angle attached to your correspondent, for the thermometer was only 93 outside against 110 in the dugout.

"Here's an important part of competitive sport that is always hard to figure out," Bill said. "It has nothing to do with any intellectual side. Mental kinks can invade the better brains.

"For example, there is the case of young Johnny Vander Meer. Here is the kid who set a world's record with two consecutive no-hit games. He was moving along like a blue streak. And then, suddenly, he loses all confidence in himself and can't find the plate.

"Physically, Johnny has remained in fine condition. His arm carries no part of a king. He can throw as hard as he ever threw. But he has to go back to the minors to find himself."

"What are his chances?" I asked Bill.

"I still believe in him," McKechnie said. "I'm for him strong and have no idea of letting him get away. He is still young, smart and game. I don't know how long it will take him to work his way back from the snarl he is in, but I believe more work will solve his problem."

"You wouldn't want to add another star to Derringer, Walters and Thompson?" I asked Bill.

The Main Angle

"What is the first essential on the mental side?" I asked Uncle Bill.

"First of all," he said, "you must believe in yourself. You must have the needed confidence to handle your job.

"A good hitter should always feel he has something on the pitcher. This goes in reverse for the good pitcher. A good ball players ought to like his chance to come through in a pinch. He ought to like pressure.

"Worry is one of the killing ailments. This leads to overtrying and to tightening up. You'd be surprised how many are afflicted this way. It's a normal, human trait. The ball player who can miss it is lucky. When Vander Meer began to lose it was worry that made him wilder than ever. He was too anxious to make good."

"I always felt that the pitcher was shivering when I came up," Moose used to say. "I worked myself into a feeling that I couldn't miss."

The Place of Porky Oliver

There was quite a discussion as to what might have happened if Ed Oliver, known as Porky, had been allowed to take part in the Little-Sarazen playoff at Canterbury, Cleveland, in the last Open.

The 23-year-old fat boy has shown since that he was no fluke campaigner. His watch may be out of gear now and then, but there is nothing wrong with his backswing.

Since that Cleveland turmoil Oliver and Little finished all square at medal play with 138 in a recent test. A few days ago Oliver won the St. Paul classic, one of the bigger and better tournaments of the year, with 276, just two strokes in front of the Open champion who is still playing brilliant golf.

So, in his last 108 holes of golf the prodigious Porky, with 225 pounds of pivot, has been 18 under even fours. Which is moving in a hurry.

Gene Sarazen has signed up Oliver for a competitive tour.

"The kid is a natural," Gene told me. "He has plenty in the way of color and he can also play a lot of golf. He has the sympathy of the crowd after that Canterbury mix-up. Here's another thing—he can hit that ball a long, long way and most of the time straight down the middle."

Sarazen on Concentration

We were discussing the fact that Bobby Jones always said he had to think of at least three things in playing a shot.

"I don't figure it quite that way," Gene said. "As I walk up to my ball I try to figure in advance the distance and the club I need. I look at the trouble ahead and if it's bad I want any mistake I might make to be away from it—not in it. If I decide the next shot is a number 4 iron I step up and play the shot without trying to think about anything else.

"The same thing goes for a putt. I line the putt up as I walk up to the ball. I decide also on the speed of the green. By the time I have taken my stance I am ready for the stroke. Too many modern golfers take too much time around the greens. This hurts more than it helps. You can't be an engineer and a golfer at the same time. I'd never hole a putt if I had to take as long as so many of them do today."

Payoff Pitching Brings Bucs Home With 10-4 Record

Corsairs Currently Are Hottest Team in National

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 5 (AP) —Payoff pitching brought the Pittsburgh Pirates home today from their most successful road trip in several years with a record of ten games won and four lost.

Currently, the Pirates' form is about the best in the majors and is attributed mainly to the steady hurling, in sharp contrast to the sorrowful spectacle presented earlier in the season when the Bucs were staggering under poor pitching.

Rip Sewell, the Plant City, Florida ,right-hander, seems to be shaping up as the ace of the fast-developing Pirate hurling staff. He notched three more victories on the eastern trip, including his four-hitter against the Phils yesterday, to bring his triumphs for the season to nine against two losses.

"Fireman" Mace Brown, who several times has been graduated from the bullpen to the starting assignment, likely will matriculate again into a starter as the Pirates open a drive tomorrow to push into the first division. He pitched a three-hitter Saturday.

Other hurlers contributing to the improved game of the Pirates are Johnny Lanning, Danny MacFayden, Ken Heintzelman and Dick Lanahan.

The Pirates have chalked up 13 victories in their last 17 encounters and 21 in their last 30. They take on the Cubs and Cards this week, beginning tomorrow.

Mel Harder Goes Route First Time This Year To Win

Veteran Cleveland Hurler Beats White Sox by 10-1 Score

CHICAGO, Aug. 5 (AP)—Mel Harder, veteran Cleveland right-hander, went the distance for the first time this season today, pitching a five-hit, 10 to 1 victory over the Chicago White Sox in the first of a four-game series.

The only Sox run came on Mike Keevich's home run over centerfielder Roy Weatherly's head inside the park in the third inning.

Harder, who never reaches the top form until mid-season, now has won seven and lost seven.

The pennant-hungry Indians rushed into a three-run lead in the second inning off chunky Ed Smith, a southpaw. Four singles by Rollie Hensley, Ben Chapman, Weatherly and Lou Boudreau and a fumble by Smith produced the tallies. They added two more in the fourth on doubles by Boudreau and Beau Bell, sandwiched around Hal Trosky's single.

Keegan Gassers Win, Merchants Lose Tourney

BALTIMORE, Aug. 5—Thanks to a forfeit victory, the Keegan Gassers of Cumberland's City League remained in the running today for the Maryland State Softball Association tournament championship.

The Gassers scored a 7-0 default decision when the Glenn L. Martin Sheet Metal crew failed to appear for a first-round battle here yesterday but another Cumberland entry, the North End Merchants outfit, wasn't so lucky, losing to American Can of Baltimore 1-0.

Fine Card for Opening of Fairgo Today

Four Sprints and Three Route Races On Inaugural Card

Record-Breaker at Bel Air in Steeplechase Here Today

Large Entry List Shows Interest of Owners

"There was a day," Eddie Brennan remarked as he handled a drumstick at Harry Manley's free feed at Fairgo last night, "when we didn't have as many horses' legs for the race meets as there are chicken legs being served here this evening." And Brennan not only remembers that day well but he has come now to relish it, after a fashion.

The trouble at Fairgo nowadays is that there are just about too many horses to handle. Brennan, secretary of the local race meet which opens its ten-day stand this afternoon at 2 o'clock, has on hand so many horses that they are stabled all over the place, with 160 in round numbers in the 16 tents erected behind the barns.

Over 300 for First Card

Today's card of eight races attracted more than 300 entries and just 64 can run in the limited fields of eight porses per race. Over 200 gee-gees were excluded, drawing stars for future reference and preference, and 105 got their names on the list of entries. If any of the first eight eligibles in each race scratch out then the "also eligibles" move up.

To say that Fairgo is all set to go is putting it mildly. The local oval is in tip-top shape, the new mutuel machines are clicking and the horsemen were matching their charges yesterday in chafing at the bit for the inaugural today.

That was proven by the record list of horses whose names were dropped into the entry box. The lower purses offered at Fairgo may have something to do with the desire of the owners to get their thoroughbreds in early for an additional try at a purse or two.

Robertson Purse

Today's inaugural is featured by the Col. W. H. Robertson Purse at six and a half furlongs for three-year-olds and up. The purse is $500.

Traumerei, Sure Touch, Buddy Al, Statement, Ken's Pop, Stormy Passage, Madfoot and Seneschal are the first eight eligibles with Irish Moon, Butterman, Little Harpist, Dark Sun, Van Elder and Gay Prank on the also eligible list. Butterman, Irish Moon and Ken's Pop are given the call, in the order named, by the handicapper but Sure Touch, a front running plater, will be the horse to catch if away well.

The opening number at five furlongs for two-year-olds promises a wide-open race with no outstanding choice. Merolee is the handicapper's horse, but Don Barr, Pop's Sister and Smart Lad can offer plenty of contention. Evva, owned by Cliff Jeffries of Frostburg, is also entered in this affair. Asunder, first on the also eligible list, can cop the cocoanuts if moved in.

Reigh Tetrarch, a good winner here last year, but not so fortunate on the other half-mile ovals this summer, gets the call in the second, being asked to beat the good Blue Prelude. More Poise, on the also eligible list, could be a nice price winner if able to get into the field, and the veteran and speedy Frederick, which has been consistent for years, will be in there winging as usual.

Rouge Catalon which broke the record at Bel Air Saturday, may not like the closer jumps at Fairgo and Gold Sweeper, which won here last year, is given the call for this event. Judges Bid is picked for show.

Three Route Races

The fourth event is another sprint at six and one-half furlongs for three-year-olds and up with the speedy Osofree favored to win under the light impost of 102 pounds. Honeymaid is selected to run second with Quick Vine a long shot possibility to take all the money. This should be a tough tussle all the way with Tavern, a consistent winner last fall that has shown signs of top form again, and Germans, winner here last year at nice odds, in the field.

The sixth is the first flat distance affair on the card with a nice field of routers entered. Sky Hostess, winner of several races, is given the nod with Schley Goree, twice winner recently, sure to offer contention. The Lewis entry of Goodwine and Duchess Dell can also be counted on to figure in the running Bellthron, Wayriel, Martha's Queen and Channing, all recent winners, are among the entries that promise a real battle for top money.

Nevor Idol is given the call in the seventh at a mile and one-sixteenth for three-year-olds and up. Dress Maker and Real Money are recent winners in the first eight that should set the early pace. Lady Peg and Best Policy, if either gets in, should be well up at the finish.

One of the best half-mile performers seen this season is entered in the eighth. Summer Stock is coupled with Sealoch as the H. G. Bedwell-Mrs. J. B. Bond entry and is capable of taking this field. Molasses Julia and Wale Signal get the call to figure in the spoils with Wale Signal on recent form capable of upsetting the dope.

HORSES TO WATCH

KAMPORT: Going to be hard to whip when they drop this one among own kind.

WORTHOWNING: There is racé in book, which suits this one perfectly.

GOODWINE: Tom Lewis has this one razor sharp.

DOUBLE BACK: Much better than last effort at Bel Air suggests.

SCHLEY GOREE: Hard hitting thoroughbred, who is worth following up.

TAM O'SHANTER: Should easily earn way in steeplechase races during meeting.

GOLD SWEEPER: Loves to run and jump. Has been schooling well and will be hard to whip first trip postward.

MAETAKE: Shipped from Bel Air in fine shape and should continue winning ways during ten days' racing, which ends August 17.

SPOUT RUN: Can win when properly placed. Butsy Hernandez will be in the saddle.

BLUE CYCLONE: Not a champion, but a hard hitting plater, who will bear watching over a distance of ground.

FAIRGO Race Notes

FAIRGO, Md., Aug. 5 — Horsemen, who schooled their jumpers through the field today says the steeplechase course is vastly better than when it was installed last year, and therefore, they are confident the chases during the Cumberland Fair Association's ten day's sport will be well worth witnessing.

The initial jumping race brougnt a trio of Bel Air winners postward. They are Rouge Catalan, holder of the Bel Air track mark; Judge's Bid and Tam-O-Shanter.

Wilmer Brinton, who will serve as general manager at Wheeling, returned from a visit to the West Virginia Racing Commission in Charleston. Brinton is amember of the official family here.

—o—

While being schooled through the field this morning, Art Cooper dashed throuhg a wing of the first jump on the backstretch, but escaped injury. His exercise boy, although thrown heavily, was uninjured.

—o—

Jockeys unable to do their weight opening day can put it down to the fine time they had at the chicken dinner thrown in the clubhouse by President Harry A. Manley. The dinner drew a capacity house of owners, trainers, jockeys, stablehands, scribes and racing officials.

—o—

Joe Farrell, general manager of Marlboro, which opens August 21, will bring a big party up from Baltimore next week. Farrell says that he can stable 1,500 horses at Marlboro and Bowie during his ten day session.

—o—

Director of Wagering Jimmy Considine has enlarged the betting arena beneath the grandstand. However, he is anxious for as many fans as possible to make use of the betting facilities in the paddock and clubhouse, thus spreading the play aroung and enabling his crew to give better service at all times.

—o—

Post time is 2 p. m. The daily double will be held on the first and second races, with the steeplechase being run as the third race.

—o—

The section set aside for the fair exhibits is being made ready for next week's attraction. Exhibitors are shipping in from every section of America; therefore no one, who can spare the time, should pass up with what promises to be the greatest fair in Fairgo's history.

Stout Hearts Prevail In Virginia Tourney

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Aug. 5 (AP) — Defending champion Forrest McNeill of Clarksburg held his own to the halfway mark of the Virginias seniors golf tournament today, as stout hearts generally prevailed over stiffening joints in the 12th renewal of the annual event.

McNeill led the starters in the Class D (age 55 to 60) around the first 18 holes of medal play, with a gross of 74 and net 71, while Virginians mostly dominated the other brackets.

Sharing the West Virginian's limelight was W. J. Jenks, Roanoke, Va., railroad official, who turned in an 83-70 card to lead a field of nine golfers entered in Class A for those 69 or older.

Approximately 125 oldsters began play under blistering sun for the individual awards and a chance at the capital prizes to be presented for various individual and team performances on Wednesday.

Team competition will begin tomorrow.

SADDLE STRAP SAM

FAIRGO, Md., Aug. 5, 1940.

Dear Folks:

Maybe it was because I made the last lap of my journey here from Hancock with Paddock Pete on my lap that I'm going out on a limb with the opening day "sure shot." My limbs were numb when we hit Fairgo, and that's the reason I couldn't notice P. P. purloining my pocketbook.

He admitted the removal of my purse from the premises of by pants, but assured it was only a touch. Therefore, there's nothing else for me to do but go to "Sure Touch" in the sixth feature, named after our good and kindly patron of the ponies, Col. W. H. Robertson.

Just remember, there's only one sure touch at the race meet: that's the one the boys put on the association last evening when everybody and his brother fed free at Fairgo.

Punk Plug Picker PADLOCK PETE

Dear S. S.

Nothing like ringing the bell first pop out of the bag. You can put a couple of thorns on this donkey and just rare back and watch the totalizator pay you odds.

Some people say history never repeats. But this goat won his first heat here last year and he ought to do it again. I'll meet you in the cashier's stall.

Yours,

PPPP

P. S.—The horse's name is Bellthorn! In the sixth.

Fine Card for Opening of Fairgo Today

Four Sprints and Three Route Races On Inaugural Card

Record-Breaker at Bel Air in Steeplechase Here Today

Large Entry List Shows Interest of Owners

"There was a day," Eddie Brennan remarked as he handled a drumstick at Harry Manley's free feed at Fairgo last night, "when we didn't have as many horses' legs for the race meets as there are chicken legs being served here this evening." And Brennan not only remembers that day well but he has come now to relish it, after a fashion.

The trouble at Fairgo nowadays is that there are just about too many horses to handle. Brennan, secretary of the local race meet which opens its ten-day stand this afternoon at 2 o'clock, has on hand so many horses that they are stabled all over the place, with 160 in round numbers in the 16 tents erected behind the barns.

Over 300 for First Card

Today's card of eight races attracted more than 300 entries and just 64 can run in the limited fields of eight porses per race. Over 200 gee-gees were excluded, drawing stars for future reference and preference, and 105 got their names on the list of entries. If any of the first eight eligibles in each race scratch out then the "also eligibles" move up.

To say that Fairgo is all set to go is putting it mildly. The local oval is in tip-top shape, the new mutuel machines are clicking and the horsemen were matching their charges yesterday in chafing at the bit for the inaugural today.

That was proven by the record list of horses whose names were dropped into the entry box. The lower purses offered at Fairgo may have something to do with the desire of the owners to get their thoroughbreds in early for an additional try at a purse or two.

Robertson Purse

Today's inaugural is featured by the Col. W. H. Robertson Purse at six and a half furlongs for three-year-olds and up. The purse is $500.

Traumerei, Sure Touch, Buddy Al, Statement, Ken's Pop, Stormy Passage, Madfoot and Seneschal are the first eight eligibles with Irish Moon, Butterman, Little Harpist, Dark Sun, Van Elder and Gay Prank on the also eligible list. Butterman, Irish Moon and Ken's Pop are given the call, in the order named, by the handicapper but Sure Touch, a front running plater, will be the horse to catch if away well.

The opening number at five furlongs for two-year-olds promises a wide-open race with no outstanding choice. Merolee is the handicapper's horse, but Don Barr, Pop's Sister and Smart Lad can offer plenty of contention. Evva, owned by Cliff Jeffries of Frostburg, is also entered in this affair. Asunder, first on the also eligible list, can cop the cocoanuts if moved in.

Reigh Tetrarch, a good winner here last year, but not so fortunate on the other half-mile ovals this summer, gets the call in the second, being asked to beat the good Blue Prelude. More Poise, on the also eligible list, could be a nice price winner if able to get into the field, and the veteran and speedy Fredrick, which has been consistent for years, will be in there winging as usual.

Rouge Catalon which broke the record at Bel Air Saturday, may not like the closer jumps at Fairgo and Gold Sweeper, which won here last year, is given the call for this event. Judges Bid is picked for show.

Three Route Races

The fourth event is another sprint at six and one-half furlongs for three-year-olds and up with the speedy Osofree favored to win under the light impost of 102 pounds. Honeymaid is selected to run second with Quick Vine a long shot possibility to take all the money. This should be a tough tussle all the way with Tavern, a consistent winner last fall that has shown signs of top form again, and Gerans, winner here last year at nice odds, in the field.

The sixth is the first flat distance affair on the card with a nice field of routers entered. Sky Hostess, winner of several races, is given the nod with Schley Goree, twice winner recently, sure to offer contention. The Lewis entry of Goodwine and Duchess Dell can also be counted on to figure in the running with Wayriel, Martha's Queen and Channing, all recent winners, are among the entries that promise a real battle for top money.

Nevor Idol is given the call in the seventh at a mile and one-sixteenth for three-year-olds and up. Dress Maker and Real Money are recent winners in the first eight that should set the early pace. Lady Peg and Best Policy, if either gets in, should be well up at the finish.

One of the best half-mile performers seen this season is entered in the eighth. Summer Stock is coupled with Sealoch as the H. G. Bedwell-Mrs. J. B. Bond entry and capable of taking this field. Moloses Julia and Wale Signal get the call to figure in the spoils with Wale Final on recent form capable of upsetting the dope.

HORSES TO WATCH

KAMPORT: Going to be hard to whip when they drop this one among own kind.

WORTHOWNING: There is race in book, which suits this one perfectly.

GOODWINE: Tom Lewis has this one razor sharp.

DOUBLE BACK: Much better than last effort at Bel Air suggests.

SCHLEY GOREE: Hard hitting thoroughbred, who is worth following up.

TAM O'SHANTER: Should easily earn way in steeplechase races during meeting.

GOLD SWEEPER: Loves to run and jump. Has been schooling well and will be hard to whip first trip postward.

MAETAKE: Shipped from Bel Air in fine shape and should continue winning ways during ten days' racing, which ends August 17.

SPOUT RUN: Can win when properly placed. Butsy Hernandez will be in the saddle.

BLUE CYCLONE: Not a champion, but a hard hitting plater, who will bear watching over a distance of ground.

FAIRGO Race Notes

FAIRGO, Md., Aug. 5 — Horsemen, who schooled their jumpers through the field today says the steeplechase course is vastly better than when it was installed last year, and therefore, they are confident the chases during the Cumberland Fair Association's ten day's sport will be well worth witnessing.

The initial jumping race brought a trio of Bel Air winners postward. They are Rouge Catalan, holder of the Bel Air track mark; Judge's Bid and Tam-O-Shanter.

—o—

Wilmer Brinton, who will serve as general manager at Wheeling, returned from a visit to the West Virginia Racing Commission in Charleston. Brinton is amember of the official family here.

Danny Dubois, former rider, who is serving as valet, was thrown while attempting to breeze Dixie S this morning. Dubois was uninjured.

—o—

While being schooled through the field this morning, Art Cooper dashed throuhg a wing of the first jump on the backstretch, but escaped injury. His exercise boy, although thrown heavily, was uninjured.

—o—

Jockeys unable to do their weight opening day can put it down to the fine time they had at the chicken dinner thrown in the clubhouse by President Harry A. Manley. The dinner drew a capacity house of owners, trainers, jockeys, stablehands, scribes and racing officials.

—o—

Joe Farrell, general manager of Marlboro, which opens August 21, will bring a big party up from Baltimore next week. Farrell says that he can stable 1,500 horses at Marlboro and Bowie during his ten day session.

—o—

Director of Wagering Jimmy Considine has enlarged the betting arena beneath the grandstand. However, he is anxious for as many fans as possible to make use of the betting facilities in the paddock and clubhouse, thus spreading the play aroung and enabling his crew to give better service at all times.

—o—

Post time is 2 p. m. The daily double will be held on the first and second races, with the steeplechase being run as the third race.

—o—

The section set aside for the fair exhibits is being made ready for next week's attraction. Exhibitors are shipping in from every section of America; therefore no one, who can spare the time, should pass up with what promises to be the greatest fair in Fairgo's history.

Stout Hearts Prevail In Virginia Tourney

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Aug. 5 (AP) — Defending champion Forrest McNeill of Clarksburg held his own to the halfway mark of the Virginias seniors golf tournament today, as stout hearts generally prevailed over stiffening joints in the 12th renewal of the annual event.

McNeill led the starters in the Class D (age 55 to 60) around the first 18 holes of medal play, with a gross of 74 and net 71, while Virginians mostly dominated the other brackets.

Sharing the West Virginian's limelight was W. J. Jenks, Roanoke, Va., railroad official, who turned in an 83-70 card to lead a field of nine golfers entered in Class A for those 69 or older.

Approximately 125 oldsters began play under blistering sun for the individual awards and a chance at the capital prizes to be presented for various individual and team performances on Wednesday.

Team competition will begin tomorrow.

SADDLE STRAP SAM

FAIRGO, Md., Aug. 5, 1940.

Dear Folks:

Maybe it was because I made the last lap of my journey here from Hancock with Paddock Pete on my lap that I'm going out on a limb with the opening day "sure shot." My limbs were numb when we hit Fairgo, and that's the reason I couldn't notice P. P. purloining my pocketbook.

He admitted the removal of my purse from the premises of by pants, but assured it was only a touch. Therefore, there's nothing else for me to do but go to "Sure Touch" in the sixth feature, named after our good and kindly patron of the ponies, Col. W. H. Robertson.

Just remember, there's only one sure touch at the race meet: that's the one the boys put on the association last evening when everybody and his brother fed free at Fairgo.

SADDLE STRAP SAM.

Punk Plug Picker PADLOCK PETE

Dear S. S.

Nothing like ringing the bell first pop out of the bag. You can put a couple of thorns on this donkey and just rare back and watch the totalizator pay you odds.

Some people say history never repeats. But this goat won his first heat here last year and he ought to do it again. I'll meet you in the cashier's stall.

Yours,

PPPP

P. S.—The horse's name is Bellthorn! In the sixth.

Teamsters Will Picket Cessna Lumber Company

Six Union Members and Two Others Walk Out; Pay Increase Sought

Six members of the Teamsters and Chauffeurs union and two sympathizers walked out of the Cessna Lumber Company, 27 Howard street, yesterday morning.

Seek Wage Increase

Crux of the controversy, representatives of both the company and union agreed, is over pay increases being asked by the union.

"The union is asking for a twenty per cent pay increase," Karl W. Radcliffe, president of the Cessna firm, said last night. "We do not feel we are in a position to meet these demands at this time.

"Here's the situation," Radcliffe continued. "We have been selected and asked for pay increases. We can't grant these increases and compete with our competitors."

While Radcliffe contended the requests, if granted, would result in unfair competition, President Saunders pointed out that union and company officials have been negotiating for the past three months and not getting any place.

The agreement between the union and the company was allowed to lapse about a year ago, Saunders added.

Mill Is Operating

Company officials said the mill operated all-day yesterday although no deliveries were made. Some deliveries will be made today, they said.

Saunders said four picketing permits had been applied for from the police department and that pickets would take their stations at the lumber company this morning.

Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman said the four permits would be granted this morning. Two gates will be picketed with one picket at each gate, Chief Eyerman said. The additional two permits are for alternates.

Of the above charter members, two are living, Michael J. Welsh, 277 Harrison street, Cumberland; James Martin Yarnall, Maryland avenue, Cumberland, both are retired B. & O. employees.

The name of William M. McKaig was adopted after William M. McKaig, who was the sixth Maryland congressional district representative at that time.

The officers today are: Eugene W. Law, president; Marshall M. Willison, vice president; George Edwin Parker, treasurer; D. G. Hansroth, secretary; John R. Metz, chaplain; Thomas M. Three Fines Are Assessed Here by Magistrate Perdew

Ralph Seggie, 719 Greene street, and Garfield G. Marsh, 324 Virginia avenue, were fined $1 each in Trial Magistrates court yesterday, as a result of a minor collision Saturday night at 9 o'clock on South Centre street. Officer Harold P. Kennard made the arrest.

Leonard W. Martin, 613 Fairview avenue, who was arrested Saturday night at 11 o'clock by Officers James J. Condon and J. E. Kelley, after they had pursued him from North Mechanic street to the Blue Bridge at Johnson street, was fined $5 in Trial Magistrates court yesterday by Magistrate Frank A. Perdew, for driving in a careless manner.

Arrested Sunday morning at 9:50 o'clock, by Officer Raymond R. Johnston, for speeding in his taxicab, Webster Slabaugh, 115 South Centre street, was fined $5 in Trial Magistrates court yesterday by Magistrate Frank A. Perdew.

Gateway Chatter

News Staff Members

Fairgo's racing plant was buzzing with activity of various kinds yesterday afternoon when NEWS reporters went out for a "last look" before the 1940 ten day meet gets underway today. Workmen were busy putting the finishing touches on the grandstand which has taken on an attractive appearance.

The "Roll Call" for employees was set for three o'clock yesterday afternoon, and while there were many who were "sure" of jobs, countless others were hanging around just hoping they could "land something."

—o—

Out on the track workmen were busy putting the half-mile oval in shape for the opening race at 2 o'clock today. The track appears to be fast and unless there is a shower before post time the gee-gees will kick up a lot of dust as they race around the turns.

—o—

Many visitors were out looking over the horses, inspecting the grandstand and track. Quite a few persons took a stroll under the grandstand to get a peep at the windows where tickets will be sold. The new totalizator board came in for quite a bit of attention. It was tested earlier in the day and officials said it was in tip-top shape for the opening race.

An interesting sight to Gateway Chatter was a jockey all bundled up in a sweater and winter clothes, jogging around the track in an effort to take off a few pounds.

It didn't seem like he would have any trouble doing it either, as the sun was beaming down and the temperature must have been in the high nineties. Saw another jockey running with a leather jacket on and carrying a suitcase just to make his task all the harder.

—o—

Race horse followers who are accustomed to seeing their favorites housed in stables, may have to look in the "tent colony" for them this year.

Due to so many horses being brought here it was necessary to secure sixteen large tents, which have been turned into stables, and many horses can be seen in stalls under a canvas top.

Yes, horses' teeth must be cared for just like humans and the old "doc," born in 1861 and a graduate of the Ontario Medical College in 1980, seemed to know just what he was doing, and, strange to say, "Bobbie," the pony didn't seem to mind a bit.

Out from a trailer a young baby on a blanket was voicing his disapproval of the hot weather and following races in no uncertain

Allegany Schools Will Open Sept. 5

Enrollment in County for Fall Term Expected to Total 16,500

Allegany county public schools will reopen Thursday, September 5, it was announced last evening by Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent.

Mr. Kopp said that on the day preceding the opening of the fall term there will be a teachers' meeting at Allegany high school auditorium.

Enrollment in the county schools this fall is expected to total about 16,500, the same as it has been for the past five years.

In regard to teacher appointments for the new term Superintendent Kopp stated that announcement will not be made for two or three weeks because of the uncertainty concerning the completion of the new Beall high school on Eckhart Flat. He added, however, that he was hopeful that the class rooms in the new building would be completed in time for occupancy September 5.

There will be approximately 475 teachers employed in the county this fall, Mr. Kopp said.

Manslaughter Charge Is Placed Against Sirna in Foard Death

Ridgeley Man Will Be Given a Preliminary Hearing Friday

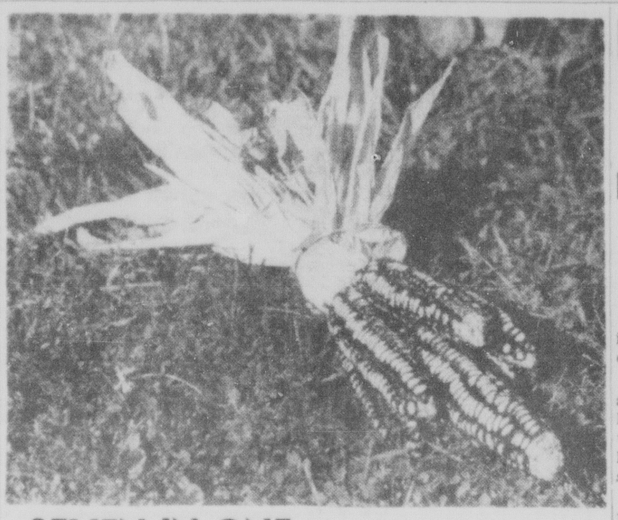

Charles A. Sirna, 24, of Ridgeley, RFD No. 1, who is being held in the city jail will be given a preliminary hearing Friday at 10 a. m., in connection with the death of Dr. William R. Foard, 56, of Cumberland, County Investigator Terrence P. Boyle announced last night.

Foard died Sunday evening in Allegany hospital eighteen hours after he was struck by a car at Laing and Virginia avenues as he started across the intersection from Keech's drug store.

Boyle said Sirna was the driver of the car which struck Foard and he was held by local police after they conducted a preliminary investigation.

Sirna was accompanied by his brother Michael, Jr., when the accident occurred and the two men took the injured physician to the hospital.

Sirna said the car is owned by his father, Michael Sirna, also of the Ridgeley address, and told officers he was traveling about fifteen miles an hour when his machine struck Foard.

SEVEN IN ONE— T. S. Blacklin, of 203 Pennsylvania avenue, has in his possession a cornstalk containing seven ears which was found on the Johnson farm at Long Run, Cairo, Ritchie county, W. Va., last year. The middle ear is nine inches long while the others average from four to six inches in length. The corn which is probably Indian, has canary yellow grains and are red at the roots. The seven ears weigh about one and one-half pounds.

New Turntable Will Be Installed by Western Maryland at Ridgeley

Improvements Included in Construction Work at Maryland Junction To Cost Around $75,000

Installation of a new turntable, erection of a new store department building and an addition to the roundhouse is included in the new construction program now underway at the Western Maryland Railway shops at Maryland Junction, one half mile from the town limits of Ridgeley, W. Va.

A new turntable 115 feet in diameter is being installed to replace the old revolvable platform which measured 100 feet across so as to accomodate the longer mallet type locomotives which are now in service.

The length of roundhouse stalls also are being increased to house the large engines when they are moved into the shops from the turntable.

A one-story steel building 50 by 150 feet will replace the former frame building to accomodate the store department. The new structure will adjoin the roundhouse.

It has been estimated that the improvements will cost between $50,000 and $75,000.

J. B. Ferguson and Company, of Hagerstown, is the building contractor.

In recent months the Western Maryland Railway Company has reported a notable increase in business, especially in steel and commercial rail shipments.

In the afternoon, about a third of the 600 delegates and visitors attending the convention went for a sail on Chesapeake Bay aboard the Schooner Capt. Pert Kelly. Those remaining attended a matinee dance.

For the purpose of giving prompt telephone service during the race meeting at Fairgo those wishing to make calls can do so at the Chesapeake and Potomac company's trailer which will be located outside the grandstand.

The trailer arrived here last evening from Baltimore and will be in charge of three young ladies.

No public telephone booths will be located within the racing plant.

Divorces Asked by Two Local Women

Myrtle Elliott and Elizabeth Lakin Docket Suits with Clerk

The Elliotts were married in March, 1935 and lived together until July 27, 1940. Mrs. Elliott claims she left her husband because his conduct became "intolerable." They have one child.

The petitioner also alleges that they own a $1500 property at 353 Dorn avenue. The home is paid for with the exception of $465, she said. Mrs. Elliott claims that prior to March, 1939, she was working and received $20 a week. Most of her salary was used to help pay for their home, she said.

Mrs. Elliott, claiming she is wholly destitute and unable to pay for the legal proceedings started yesterday, has asked the court that she be granted a divorce, the guardianship of her child and such alimony, or allowance from the estate, to which she may be entitled.

In another suit, Elizabeth Buley Lakin filed against her husband, Arthur Fairfax Lakin.

The petition alleges that the Lakins were married in Bedford, Pa., in 1928 and that she has lived apart from her husband since June 30, 1940.

Mrs. Lakin charges that her husband treated her with "harshness, cruelty and brutality, has been drinking intoxicants excessively and has failed to support and maintain her and a minor child, age eleven."

Mrs. Lakin states that she is a school teacher but does not make enough money to maintain herself and child and employ counsel to forward the litigation started yesterday. She asks a divorce, that her husband pay the cost of the proceedings and be restrained from going to her home at 8 Virginia avenue.

Both suits were docketed by Attorney Morgan C. Harris.

Twenty-seven "Tote" Machines Installed At Fairgo Track

Twenty-seven "tote" machines have been installed at ticket sellers' windows beneath the grandstand for the Cumberland Fair Association's race meeting which opens today.

The machines turn out tickets of the following denominations: $10 straight, $10 place and show, $5 straight, $5 place and show, $3 combination and $2 straight, place and show.

There are also twenty-three cashiers' windows and one information window, a total of fifty-one in all.

All tickets are numbered and those desiring to bet are requested to tell the ticket seller the number of the horse as designated on the program instead of the name of the thoroughbred.

Local 1874 Members Will Hear Reports Of Committee

Local 1874 Textile Workers Union of America, will hold two membership meetings here today, the first at 10:30 a. m., and the other at 7:30 p. m., at the T.W.U.A. hall, North Mechanic street.

James A. Dundon, president of Local 1874, said last night, members would hear the negotiating committee's report on the Celanese Corporation's proposals in answer to the union's requests for changes in the terms of the present contract and wage increases.

Members will vote on whether to accept or reject the company's proposals, Dundon said.

Board of Directors Decide To Let Members Act on Proposal

The board of directors of the Junior Association of Commerce decided last night to poll its membership by mail on the question of the "Four Year Plan," as a project.

Since the idea was offered the membership after the unanimous approval of the board several weeks ago, it has been debated at length on several occasions, but no formal action has been taken.

In order to either proceed with the project, or discard it, the board agreed that action has been delayed long enough, and definite expressions should be obtained from its 125 members.

Let Members Decide

Despite their constituted right to adopt the project, if they wish, the board of directors, after unanimously approving it, offered it to the membership for their expressions. This was done because of the nature of the project.

Two questions will appear on inquiries to be mailed. The first, "Do you favor the "Four Year Plan" as a project for the Junior Association of Commerce?"

Second, "If you are opposed to the "Four Year Plan" as a project for the Junior Association of Commerce, what do you recommend?"

A meeting of the board will be held Monday at 7:30 p .m. to tabulate the returns.

State Report Given

A report was made by Fred Z. Hetzel of the state meeting of the association held in Hagerstown. He said the state group adopted a resolution to sponsor and support an anti-fireworks law for Maryland. He also reported that Max Armor, of Frederick, state president, was appointed to the Governor's Defense Committee.

The board of directors adopted a motion recommending that the State Association withhold formal stand or action at this time upon the subject of compulsory military training in the United States. All associations in the state have been asked for an expression or recommendation regarding various phases of conscription.

Hetzel also reported that the State Association picnic, an annual event, will be held in Frederick, September 15.

NEW STATE MANAGER—Mrs. Henrietta A. Snider, of Richmond, Va., national attendant of the Woodmen Circle, has been appointed state manager of Maryland, District of Columbia and Virginia. Grove City Circle No. 11, in Cumberland has been notified of the appointment.

Harry A. Manley Gives Dinner at The Jockey Club

Annual Event Is Attended by Horsemen, Scribes and Others

Food "fit for a king" was served the men who follow the "sport of kings" yesterday beneath the Jockey Club at Fairgo when President and General-Manager Harry A. Manley of the Cumberland Fair Race Association was host to the horsemen, the scribes who write about them, and the guineas, grooms, jockeys and whatnot who will play a part in the ten day meet that starts today.

Presiding with Manley was Edward J. Brennan, race secretary, and Cliff White who is Manley's able aide at the local plant.

There was none of the usual folderole of fancy food; just good grub that the horsemen and their henchmen relish, and the fact that it was fit was furnished by the fine job all present did of finishing it to the last morsel.

The piece de resistance, that offered no resistance, was tender spring chicken, fried a golden brown; boiled potatoes, garnished with parsley and trickling melted butter; creamed lima beans, beets, and all the trimmings with pickles, celery, and brown crust warm biscuits. Beer of both brands brewed here went along as the appetizer and the afterpiece.

Two hundred and fifty horsemen and their henchmen, with the scribes and retinue of the racing commission thrown in for good measure, enjoyed the treat of the fair association. There was no speechmaking and there was no chance for the usual call for cooperation.

There was every evidence in advance that all present were cooperating, at least to the extent of enjoying a hearty meal. And everybody said so when wishing Manager Manley well.

The dinner was prepared by Mrs. Mary Miller, assisted by a corps of capable waitresses. W. Murray Cordry was in charge of arrangements within the banquet hall.

Local Residents Ask Council To Improve Streets

Residents of Oak and Roberts streets yesterday petitioned the mayor and city council to make street improvements as did W. R. E. King, of 450 Columbia avenue, who stated that he "has been trying for seven years" to have the city correct conditions that exist in an alley that runs from Columbia street to Henderson avenue.

Unsafe for Pedestrians

Seven petitioners from Oak street stated that their street is unsafe for pedestrians as well as automobiles. Complainants of Roberts street and Olive avenue urged immediate oiling from Potomac street to the C. & O. canal, claiming that the dusty condition was detrimental to health.

Mr. King said that at a point where the alley leading from Columbia street to Henderson avenue crosses Bond street there is a fall of about three feet which causes damage to cars and has torn bumpers from his machine.

All three complaints were referred to the city engineer and street commissioner.

Winterberg Appointed

Appointment of Henry Winterberg, 65, of 402 North Mechanic street, as night watchman at the city warehouse, to succeed Herbert Lapp, resigned, was confirmed.

A check in the sum of $150 was issued to Mrs. Ruth C. Molinari in compromise of a claim against the city for damage inflicted to the basement of her home at 32 Cumberland street, which she alleged was flooded five times following the paving of the street. Her original claim was $237.94.

An application by William J. Cruthers for a night club license at 429 Virginia avenue, was referred to the police department. Cruthers said he planned to operate Monday through Friday between 8:30 and 11:15 p. m.

Teamsters Will Picket Cessna Lumber Company

Six Union Members and Two Others Walk Out; Pay Increase Sought

Six members of the Teamsters and Chauffeurs union and two sympathizers walked out of the Cessna Lumber Company, 27 Howard street, yesterday morning.

Seek Wage Increase

Crux of the controversy, representatives of both the company and union agreed, is over pay increases being asked by the union.

"The union is asking for a twenty per cent pay increase," Karl W. Radcliffe, president of the Cessna firm, said last night. "We do not feel we are in a position to meet these demands at this time.

"Here's the situation," Radcliffe continued. "We have been selected and asked for pay increases. We can't grant these increases and compete with our competitors."

While Radcliffe contended the requests, if granted, would result in unfair competition, President Saunders pointed out that union and company officials have been negotiating for the past three months and not getting any place.

The agreement between the union and the company was allowed to lapse about a year ago, Saunders added.

Mill Is Operating

Company officials said the mill operated all-day yesterday although no deliveries were made. Some deliveries will be made today, they said.

Saunders said four picketing permits had been applied for from the police department and that pickets would take their stations at the lumber company this morning.

Police Chief Oscar A. Eyerman said the four permits would be granted this morning. Two gates will be picketed with one picket at each gate, Chief Eyerman said. The additional two permits are for alternates.

Gateway Chatter

by News Staff Members

Fairgo's racing plant was buzzing with activity of various kinds yesterday afternoon when NEWS reporters went out for a "last look" before the 1940 ten day meet gets underway today. Workmen were busy putting the finishing touches on the grandstand which has taken on an attractive appearance.

The "Roll Call" for employees was set for three o'clock yesterday afternoon, and while there were many who were "sure" of jobs, countless others were hanging around just hoping they could "land something."

—o—

Out on the track workmen were busy putting the half-mile oval in shape for the opening race at 2 o'clock today. The track appears to be fast and unless there is a shower before post time the gee-gees will kick up a lot of dust as they race around the turns.

—o—

Many visitors were out looking over the horses, inspecting the grandstand and track. Quite a few persons took a stroll under the grandstand to get a peep at the windows where tickets will be sold. The new totalizator board came in for quite a bit of attention. It was tested earlier in the day and officials said it was in tip-top shape for the opening race.

An interesting sight to Gateway Chatter was a jockey all bundled up in a sweater and winter clothes, jogging around the track in an effort to take off a few pounds.

It didn't seem like he would have any trouble doing it either, as the sun was beaming down and the temperature must have been in the high nineties. Saw another jockey running with a leather jacket on and carrying a suitcase just to make his task all the harder.

Proof that being a jockey isn't all fun.

—o—

Race horse followers who are accustomed to seeing their favorites housed in stables, may have to look in the "tent colony" for them this year.

Due to so many horses being brought here it was necessary to secure sixteen large tents, which have been turned into stables, and many horses can be seen in stalls under a canvas top.

They didn't seem to mind, however, and were busy at the feedbag or just looking around taking everything in.

Strolling around like he owned the place was a "billy goat," no doubt the pal of some race horse. Down at one of the tents "Doc" Finnigan was busy filling the teeth of a lead pony."

Yes, horses' teeth must be cared for just like humans and the old "doc," born in 1861 and a graduate of the Ontario Medical College in 1980, seemed to know just what he was doing, and, strange to say, "Bobbie," the pony didn't seem to mind a bit.

Out from a trailer a young baby on a blanket was voicing his disapproval of the hot weather and following races in no uncertain

Divorces Asked by Two Local Women

Myrtle Elliott and Elizabeth Lakin Docket Suits with Clerk

Two wives filed divorce proceedings against their husbands yesterday in Circuit Court.

The Elliotts were married in March, 1935 and lived together until July 27, 1940. Mrs. Elliott claims she left her husband because his conduct became "intolerable." They have one child.

The petitioner also alleges that they own a $1500 property at 353 Dorn avenue. The home is paid for with the exception of $465, she said. Mrs. Elliott claims that prior to March, 1939, she was working and received $20 a week. Most of her salary was used to help pay for their home, she said.

Mrs. Elliott, claiming she is wholly destitute and unable to pay for the legal proceedings started yesterday, has asked the court that she be granted a divorce, the guardianship of her child and such alimony, or allowance from the estate, to which she may be entitled.

In another suit, Elizabeth Buley Lakin filed against her husband, Arthur Fairfax Lakin.

The petition alleges that the Lakins were married in Bedford, Pa., in 1928 and that she has lived apart from her husband since June 30, 1940.

Mrs. Lakin charges that her husband treated her with "harshness, cruelty and brutality, has been drinking intoxicants excessively and has failed to support and maintain her and a minor child, age eleven."

Mrs. Lakin states that she is a school teacher but does not make enough money to maintain herself and child and employ counsel to forward the litigation started yesterday. She asks a divorce, that her husband pay the cost of the proceedings and be restrained from going to her home at 8 Virginia avenue.

Both suits were docketed by Attorney Morgan C. Harris.

Board of Directors Decide To Let Members Act on Proposal

The board of directors of the Junior Association of Commerce decided last night to poll its membership by mail on the question of the "Four Year Plan," as a project.

Since the idea was offered the membership after the unanimous approval of the board several weeks ago, it has been debated at length on several occasions, but no formal action has been taken.

In order to either proceed with the project, or discard it, the board agreed that action has been delayed long enough, and definite expressions should be obtained from its 125 members.

Let Members Decide

Despite their constituted right to adopt the project, if they wish, the board of directors, after unanimously approving it, offered it to the membership for their expressions This was done because of the nature of the project.

Two questions will appear on inquiries to be mailed. The first, "Do you favor the "Four Year Plan" as a project for the Junior Association of Commerce?"

Second, "If you are opposed to the "Four Year Plan" as a project for the Junior Association of Commerce, what do you recommend?"

A meeting of the board will be held Monday at 7:30 p .m. to tabulate the returns.

Annual Event Is Attended by Horsemen, Scribes and Others

Food "fit for a king" was served the men who follow the "sport of kings" yesterday beneath the Jockey Club at Fairgo when President and General-Manager Harry A. Manley of the Cumberland Fair Race Association was host to the horsemen, the scribes who write about them, and the guineas, grooms, jockeys and whatnot who will play a part in the ten day meet that starts today.

There was none of the usual folderole of fancy food; just good grub that the horsemen and their henchmen relish, and the fact that it was fit was furnished by the fine job all present did of finishing it to the last morsel.

The piece de resistance, that offered no resistance, was tender spring chicken, fried a golden brown; boiled potatoes, garnished with parsley and trickling melted butter; creamed lima beans, beets, and all the trimmings with pickles, celery, and brown crust warm biscuits. Beer of both brands brewed here went along as the appetizer and the afterpiece.

Two hundred and fifty horsemen and their henchmen, with the scribes and retinue of the racing commission thrown in for good measure, enjoyed the treat of the fair association. There was no speechmaking and there was no chance for the usual call for cooperation.

There was every evidence in advance that all present were cooperating, at least to the extent of enjoying a hearty meal. And everybody said so when wishing Manager Manley well.

The dinner was prepared by Mrs. Mary Miller, assisted by a corps of capable waitresses. W. Murray Cordry was in charge of arrangements within the banquet hall.

Local Residents Ask Council To Improve Streets

Residents of Oak and Roberts streets yesterday petitioned the mayor and city council to make street improvements as did W. R. E. King, of 450 Columbia avenue, who stated that he "has been trying for seven years" to have the city correct conditions that exist in an alley that runs from Columbia street to Henderson avenue.

Unsafe for Pedestrians

Seven petitioners from Oak street stated that their street is unsafe for pedestrians as well as automobiles. Complainants of Roberts street and Olive avenue urged immediate oiling from Potomac street to the C. & O. canal, claiming that the dusty condition was detrimental to health.

Mr. King said that at a point where the alley leading from Columbia street to Henderson avenue crosses Bond street there is a fall of about three feet which causes damage to cars and has torn bumpers from his machine.
